HARDING WARNS NATION OF FARM CRISIS

ROUSH ON STAND IN OWN BEHALF

Former Police Chief Testifies in Burkhardt Charges

TRIAL DRAWING TO A CLOSE

Hundreds Hear Evidence of Man Under Fire

O. J. Roush, former police chief took the stand in his own behalf before the civil service commission shortly before noon Monday, in his trial on a series of twelve charges made by F. A. Burkhardt, former mayor.

He will be the last witness to testify for the defense, it is announced. The case will be argued and it will be in the hands of the commission to decide Roush innocent or guilty.

If the charges are not substantiated in opinion of the commission, Roush will assume reins of control at the police station.

If however, the commission decides that Mayor Burkhardt's order shall stand, the former chief still has the right of appeal to common pleas court.

INTEREST IS INTENSE.

As Roush took the stand, a sudden hush fell over the crowded court room. The dropping of a pin could have been plainly heard.

Roush stated that he became Chief during the street car riots, when the city was in a turmoil and part of the force had resigned, because of the situation.

Answering charge No. 8, Roush recalled arrest of three "high jacks" on Marion-rd. The men had 86 quarts of Comet whiskey, he said. The men were fined here and th matter carried into Federal court, where additional fines of $1,000 each were assessed.

Deputy United States Bartley came from Toledo to get the whiskey. One quart had been broken on the vault floor. The remainder were packed. Bartley gave Roush and Frank Eberle each one bottle.

A return signed by the deputy offered as evidence, showed that 86 bottle more or less were turned over to him

WAS SEEKING HARRISON

Roush said he often visited the restuarant operated by Irene Allen, in making rounds of the city. He had eaten there and did not deny attempting to enter a rear room to learn who was there. He had gone to the place, he said, to see if Webb Harrison was there.

In response to a question from the commission, Roush testified that he could not have forced his way into the room without a warrant.

Roush absolutely denied that there had ever been a liaison with either of the Lehman girls.

The two families were neighbors, he said.

Roush testified that statements of Webb Harrison, colored police officer, that he had sought to influence his testimony before the grand jury, were false.

He instructed Harrison to tell what he knew, Roush said.

"I thought he knew a good deal about the place too."

The witness denied ever visiting the Fred Harrison cabaret. He gave an order to his men he said. He was a material witness against Harrison when the saloon man was tried and sent to prison.

Al. H Roberts, according to Roush, was a frequent visitor at the station. During the September 1920 grand jury he is alleged to have called the witness to Doyle's saloon. Union and Market-sts.

WHISKEY DEMANDED

Roberts demanded whiskey, Roush said. He refused to give him liquor, because he was foreman of the grand jury, the witness said. The two had started to Roush's home in a car.

Roush told of driving Roberts home and the latter asking him to leave a bottle of whiskey in a fence corner.

The visit to Roberts' house was at the latter's request, Roush said.

Roberts warned him against officers on the force, he said.

Roush told the commission he was never drunk in his life. He admitted taking drinks.

He stated that he was at the Merchants' picnic at Cedar Point as guest of the organization. He sang with the quartette he said.

"Why did you sing?"

"Well, I always thought I was a singer."

Roush could not remember seeing Officer Dotson at the station the night of the Elks clambake in 1920. He came in at nine o'clock and went home. He was not intoxicated, he declared.

Liquor was never brought into court, if the defendant pleaded guilty. Such liquor was not destroyed.

Ross Crisenberry, detective at the Locomotive plant, said the party did not leave the station until after roll call the day the bonds were found.

He heard no conversation regarding a split of reward while in the car or at the station.

"Roush made na erasures while I was in the office," Jackson said.

"Could you have seen, if he had?"

"I surely could have."

"Kipker followed Crisenberry out of the office, the two goig up town and returning later. Francis Dur-

FROZEN HYDRANTS ADD TO FIRE DANGER

Danger of property being destroyed by fire, always more pronounced in cold weather, when householders fire stoves and furnaces more heavily, is increased in Lima by possibility of defective hydrants freezing, according to Fire Chief John Mack, in a statement Monday.

"There are 25 to 30 hydrants in this city that are required to be packed with manure to prevent freezing and thus making them useless in case of fire in the neighborhood where they exist," Chief Mack said.

When it is necessary to use a hydrant thus protected, it must be dug out of the manure, piled about the fire plug and heaped over the top, held in place inside a large wooden box, from which the top and bottom have been removed, the chief declared.

"We have 12 to 15 hydrants," Mack asserted, "that must be pumped out two or three times a week, to insure that they can be used when needed, in cold weather. This condition is created by one of three things. The valve is defective and permits seepage of water from the main into the stem of the hydrant; the drainage opening at the bottom has become clogged and prevents escape of the water, or seepage water from the ground about the hydrants located in low places fills the stem several times a week."

It is this latter condition which causes the most trouble, Mack stated and which requires that a member of the department make inspection trips several times a week.

"We find," the fire chief declared, "that when new hydrants are installed, it pays to plug the drain openings at the bottom, below the frost line and pump out the water remaining after the standard has been used, in event of fire or for commercial purposes. This prevents future trouble.

"We believe we have the situation well in hand, but there is always danger of a fire hydrant freezing," Mack said.

A patrol system is maintained daily. Abraham Fisher, a member of the department, is detailed to give the inspection and repair work his attention. Fisher uses a Ford truck, equipped with pump and necessary tools and appliances. Hydrants used by contractors, to supply water necessary in building projects, are given particular attention by Fisher.

Several instances have occurred where, thru carelessness, hydrants have frozen up, Mack said. In these cases it is necessary to kindle a fire about the fire plug and thaw it out. There are 432 fire hydrants in the city, records show.

URGES QUICK AID FOR PLANTERS

Situation Grave, President Says in Opening Conference

ASKS FOR FINANCIAL RELIEF

Proposes Legislation to Create Loan System

WASHINGTON—(Associated Press.)—Development of a thoro code of law and business procedure with the proper machinery of finance, to assure the farmer as generous a supply of working capital on as reasonable terms as is granted to other industries, was advocated here today by President Harding, in opening the national agricultural conference.

"An industry," the president said, "more vital than any other, in which half the nation's wealth is invested can be relied upon for good security and certain returns."

Declaring that in the matter of what may be called fixed investment capital, the disadvantage of the farmer so impressed public opinion that the federal farm loan board was established to meet the need, the president said. The farmer still needed some provision for supplying him with working capital.

CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATIONS.

"Compared with other industries," he continued, "the wonder is that agriculture, thus deprived of easy access to both investment and accommodation capital has prospered even so well.

"The co-operative loaning associations of Europe have been effective incentives to united action by farmers," he continued, "and have led them directly into co-operation in both production and marketing which have contributed greatly to the stabilization and prosperity of agriculture."

Whether these organizations are considered as means to buying the farmers' requirements in a cheaper market, the president asserted or the selling of his products in a more remunerative market the conclusion in all cases is the same; it is that the farmers is as good a business man as any other if he has the chance.

COMPARISON DRAWN.

The manufacturer, Harding said, whose turnover is rapid, finds he can borrow money from the bank on short time notes, when he needs working capital and his money will come back to him in time to meet his short term obligation. On the other hand, he continued, the farmer's turnover is a loan from a year in most crops, and some times to three years in the cattle industry.

The president told the conference that "concerning the grim reality of the present crisis in agriculture there can be no differences of opinion among informed people."

"The depressions and discouragements," he continued, "are not peculiar to agriculture and I think it fair to say there could have been no avoidance of a great slump from war time excesses to the hardships of readjustment."

MUST HELP SELVES.

"It cannot be too strongly urged that the farmer must be ready to help himself," he added. "This conference would do most lasting good if it would find ways to impress the great mass of farmers to avail themselves of the best methods. By this I mean that in the last analysis, legislation can do little more than give the farmer the chance to organize and help himself."

The president then referred to co-operative marketing. It should be possible to afford to the farmers, he said, ample provision of law under which they may carry on in co-operative fashion these business operations which lend themselves to that method and which "thus handled would bring advantages to both the farmer and his consuming public." The farmers he continued, must be responsible for doing the rest and must themselves learn organization and the practical procedure of co-operation.

Lack of essential information, Harding asserted, was one of the most serious obstacles to a proper balancing of agricultural production.

"With proper financial support for agriculture and with instrumentalities for the collection and dissemination of information," he added, "a group of co-operative marketing organizations would be able to advise their members as to the probable demand for staples, and to propose measures for proper limitation of acreage in particular crops.

TRANSPORTATION QUESTION

"The farmer does not demand special consideration to the disadvantage of any other class, he asks, only for that consideration which shall place vital industry on a parity of opportunity with others, and enable it to serve the broadest interest."

Turning to the subject of transportation, the president said that "if broad visioned statesmanship shall establish fundamentally sound policies toward transportation, the present crisis will one day be regarded as a piece of good fortune to the nation."

"To this time railroad construction, financing and operation," he added, "have been unscientific and devoid of proper consideration for the wider concerns of the community. To say this is simply to admit a fact which applies to practically every railroad system in the world."

ROME MOURNS AS POPE IS BURIED

Thousands in Procession, Pay Homage to Pontiff

OLD CEREMONY CUT SHORT

Much Omitted as Wished by His Holiness

DEATH REGISTERED

ROME—(Associated Press)—The certificate of Pope Benedict's death was registered at the city's bureau of deaths today. It reads:

"The undersigned physician hereby states that at six o'clock a. m. January 22, his holiness, Pope Benedict XV, Giacomo Della Chiesa, expired following an attack of bronchio-pneumonia brought on by influenza.

(Signed)

"Dr. Raffaele Battistini."

(BY HENRY WOOD)

ROME — (United Press) — The burial of Pope Benedict XV with solemn ceremony which will extend over a period of ten days, began this evening.

The body of the late pontiff, which lay in state in the sacrament chapel for a brief while today was to be placed in the first of three coffins in which it will finally be interred and then it will rest in the vault of St. Peters.

Thousands had passed the grilled doors of the sacrament chapel and kissed the foot of the dead pontiff since 9 o'clock when the body was brought with ceremony from the throne room of the Vatican.

Late this afternoon, the doors of St. Peters were closed to permit the actual burial service to begin.

CEREMONIES CURTAILED

Much of the ages-old ceremony connected with the death of the supreme pontiff of the Catholic church had to be abandoned today in accordance with Pope Benedict's last wishes.

The pope's body was not embalmed and the ceremonies of lying-in-state in the Vatican throne room and in the sacrament chapel had to be considerably curtailed.

Two days' mourning, with flags thruout Italy at half-mast and all amusement places closed, ordered for the first time in the history of the federated Italian government, began today.

The official visit of Minister Di Rodino, minister of justice in the Italian cabinet, to the Vatican yesterday, where he formally expressed condolences in the name of the government, also was unprecedented.

These events led today to a belief that the life aim of Pope Benedict, a reconciliation between the church and state in Italy might be imminent.

CARDINALS TO MEET

Nine days' official mourning for Pope Benedict begins today and the conclave of cardinals which will elect a successor to Pope Benedict XV has been summoned for February 2.

Pope Benedict's request that his body be not embalmed, upset most of the traditional ceremony connected with the death of a pontiff.

Originally the body would have been permitted to lie in state today at the Vatican until 4 o'clock this afternoon, 24 hours after its removal from the death chamber. There early today it was on private view with only the highest officials admitted to pay homage to the dead pontiff. Because of the necessity for hasty burial, however, the body was removed this morning and a brief lying-in-state ceremony at St. Peters permitted.

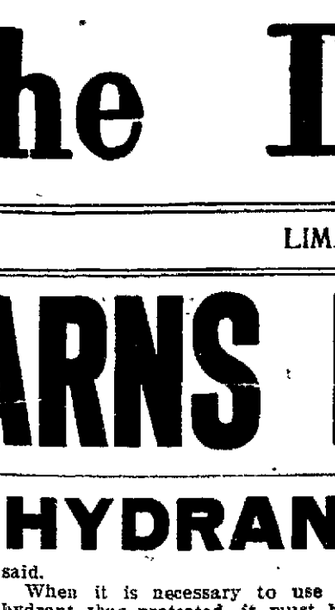

Thousands who might have taken part in the customary ceremony of kissing the pope's foot were disappointed, altho other thousands were able to make their obeisance as the dead pontiff lay for awhile in the sacrament chapel, his feet protruding thru the chancel.

The actual interment of the pope's body customarily takes place within 24 hours after it is first exposed to public view, but today this was hastened because of decomposition.

Outside the Vatican, great crowds had gathered, for the word had spread that the removal was to take place early today, instead of at 4 o'clock as originally planned.

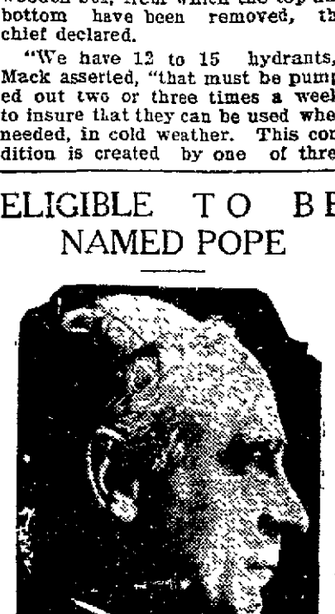

A procession formed in one of the large halls of the Vatican, headed by a detachment of the noble guards. After the guards came Cardinal Gasparri, Cardinal Camerlengo and the dean. Members of the sacred college followed, walking two by two, and after them came Vatican prelates, private chamberlains of Pope Benedict, chamberlains of the cape and sword, heads of various religious orders and functionaries of the Vatican generally.

ELIGIBLE TO BE NAMED POPE

Raphael Cardinal Merry Del Val

Cardinal Merry Del Val is now at the vatican where he is discharging the pope's duties temporarily. He is of Spanish descent. He was born in 1865.

Vincent Cardinal Vannutelli

Cardinal Vannutelli ranks high in the college of cardinals, but by some is considered too old to bear the burdens of the pontificate. He was born December 5, 1836.

RETURNED TO PRISON

LANCASTER — Stephan Norak, 14, Cleveland, was returned to the state industrial school this morning from which he escaped last night. The lad entered the store room and outfitted himself with civilian clothes before leaving the institution. He had spent the night in a farmer's barn and was almost frozen when apprehended by an interurban car conductor.

VISCOUNT BRYCE TAKEN BY DEATH

Former British Ambassador to U. S. Dies at Sidmouth

STYLED "ENGLISH YANKEE"

Knew This Country Better Than Many Americans

LONDON — (Associated Press) —Civilian and official England today mourned the death of Viscount Bryce of Dechmont, former ambassador to the United States, who passed away at Sidmouth yesterday. Announcement of the death of the noted statesman was unexpected. Weakness of the heart intervened in his illness and the end came suddenly.

As a man of letters and a publicist, Viscount Bryce was a world figure. Outside of his own country he was best known in the United States, where since the early eighties his interests had so largely centered that he was sometimes styled an "English Yankee." One remarkable thing repeatedly said of him was that he knew America better than most Americans. His "History of the American Commonwealth" has been a standard textbook in the schools of the United States for the past generation — providing the spectacle of a foreigner instructing Americans in the workings and structure of their own life and laws, as de Tocqueville had done to some extent years previously in his "Democracy in America."

NOTABLE HUMAN LINK

Thru his book, thru innumerable addresses in his country, and thru five years service as the British Ambassador in Washington, Viscount Bryce became one of the most notable human links in the chain of friendly relations between the United States and Great Britain. The extent to which he made his personality felt is explained in part by the fact that while he was a scholar and statesman of the highest rank he always could be found willing to meet people and to discuss publicly and in a friendly way topics of national and international interest.

He was a man of varied achievements, and mere reference to his interest in America does not by any means sum up his remarkable career. He was called "the most versatile living Englishman," which would be true, says one biographer, had he not been born in Ireland, son of a Scotch father and Irish mother, and educated in Glasgow, whence he went to Oxford. He was born in Belfast, May 10, 1838; his father being the Rev. James Bryce of Glasgow, a clergyman of the established Church, and his mother Margaret (Young) Bryce of County Antrim, Ireland. He was educated in the high school and University of Glasgow and subsequently gained a scholarship at Oxford, from which he obtained his B. A. degree in 1862 and his D. C. L. in 1870. He afterwards added to his honors degrees in many of the most famous universities in the world.

SEAT IN CABINET

In 1886 he was appointed Under Secreary of State for Foreign Affairs; he served as Chancellor for the Duchy of Lancaster, which gave him a seat in the Gladstone Cabinet; and he was President of the Board of Trade in the Roseberry government. With the Liberals in power again in 1906, Mr. Bryce was made Chief Secretary for Ireland, a post for which he was preeminently fitted, as he alway had been a friend to Ireland and an exponent of Home Rule. After holding this post for thirteen months in the Campbell-Bannerman Ministry he resigned to accept King Edward VII's appointment of him as Ambassador to the United States to succeed Sir Henry Mortimer Durand.

FORD TRYING TO MAKE 3 DREAMS COME TRUE

BANISH CITIES, IS FIRST HOBBY

Providing More Light, Heat and Power Second Vision

CHANGE MONEY PLAN, THIRD

Auto King Tells of Hopes and Outlook Ahead

(BY NORRIS QUINN)

DETROIT — (Special)— Henry Ford is trying to make three dreams come true.

These dreams have been behind every massive business move Ford has made or planned in the last year —even his bid to buy the undeveloped power plant at Muscle Shoals, Ala.

And if you watch closely you'll see these three dreams behind every Ford enterprise in years to come:

ONE — Doing away with the necessity for great cities and getting the people—even industrial workers—back to the soil.

TWO — Hastening the arrival of an era when heat, light and power will be so abundant that "it will be wasteful not to use them"— this by intensive development of water power.

THREE — Revising our financial system so "money won't have the power to stop things."

Ford told all about his three dreams and how he hopes to make them come true in an interview here.

DOOM OF GREAT CITIES

"The great cities are doomed," the auto magnate said. He made a gesture as if he were actually sweeping the cities away.

"I don't mean they'll fall into ruins immediately. But they'll go sooner than you think. A few will stay. They'll be big distributing and assembling points—not congested centers.

"The people will go back to the farm and small town. They're headed that way now.

"The city's served a useful purpose. It's taught people how to live in groups and close communities. When they go back to the country they won't tolerate unpaved streets, badly equipped schools, defective sanitation.

"The coming small town will have all the advantages of the big city and none of its drawbacks."

"Then will factory workers commute to and from their work?"

"Not at all!" Ford answered. "Their work will commute to and from them! They'll complete the work in their village workshop — then it will be sent to one of the big assembling and distributing points.

ALREADY ACCOMPLISHED FACT

"Now I want to hear someone say it can't be done—

"Because I've already done it!

"I'm experimenting in several small Michigan towns. Not 30 miles from Detroit I've established a small shop run by water power in an old mill. Work is sent down there, finished and brought back here.

"The workmen live under semi-rural conditions. They have gardens. They may keep chickens and cows, if they wish.

"Entertainment? The social life of the small town will adjust itself all right. People will get up their own shows, develop their own entertainment. There'll be fewer spectators and more actors."

WATER THE GOLDEN FLUID

Ford paused. He'd been talking rapidly. Then—

"I spoke of using water power to operate the little experimental plants in Michigan," he went on.

"Let me tell you water is the golden fluid of the future. It will give us our light, our heat, our power.

"And we can't exhaust it. As long as it rains, rivers will flow and they'll supply power ceaselessly.

"When water power possibilities really are developed, the supply of heat, light and power will be so great it will be wasteful not to use all you can.

"And it will cost little. A river charges nothing for flowing. And it costs but little to make the power and deliver it to the user."

Then Ford turned to currency reform, the one of his three projects that's had wide publicity.

"Money's valueless except to move things," he said. "You can't eat money. It's useful only as a medium — just like this wire." And Ford seized the wire that dangled from his telephone.

"But money doesn't fulfill its function. When you want to use it, you have to go to a money lender to buy it.

"What does 'deflation' mean? That bankers are trying to make the supply of money approximate the supply of gold.

"Why, to make business run on gold is like making passenger traffic on a main line dependent on facilities of a local branch line with one train a day!

"That's why I believe in issuing currency backed by public wealth."

OPPORTUNITY AT MUSCLE SHOALS

Ford paused again.

"Now, at Muscle Shoals," he said, "there's a chance to work out all these things.

"That whole country could be laid out in semi-rural communities.

"And water power possibilities are just waiting to be developed. The Tennessee river is second in power possibilities only to the Niagara.

"That power should be used to manufacture southern raw products right there, instead of shipping them half way across the continent and back again.

"And Muscle Shoals could furnish the opportunity to show the government how to develop public works without paying three times their cost in interest charges. But our public officials will have to see the idea clearly first.

"Right now every farmer should be encouraged to harness whatever water power he may have, if it isn't any more than a rill. Even that will heat the farm home and run the farm machinery."

NO PERCENTAGE IN BEING MILLIONAIRE PRO TEM

(BY ROY GIBBONS)

CHICAGO —(Special)—"There's no man as happy as a poor man," says Russel Jonah. "Uneasy lies the chap whose trousers pocket holds a million!"

And Jonah—he's no relation to the one who reposed within the whale—speaks from experience.

For he's been a millionaire.

Even if he is in jail right now recovering from a $500,000 spending spree.

It all started eight months ago when Jonah left two soiled shirts and a collar in the check room at the Grand Central Terminal, New York.

When he went back to get the bundle, he received a bulky package that held half a million in War Department commutation, ration and transportation tickets.

Only a signature was needed to make the vouchers legal tender and Jonah supplied that, says the Department of Justice.

Then he started being a millionaire. He criss-crossed the country from coast to coast in Pullmans. He stayed at the best hotels. He tried to spend $1000 a day.

But soon millionaire existence became tiresome. Obsequious porters were a bore. Jonah bought a map and shot pins into it with a rubber band and went to whatever city the pin indicated.

Until one unlucky pin brought him to Chicago.

Here he was seized by federal agents. He's held in $10,000 bond, charged with forgery.

"The chap who said money was the root of all evil has the right slant on things," said Jonah between the bars of his cell.

"I'm going to be as poor as I can forever when I get out of this mess.

"Love in a hut for me hereafter.

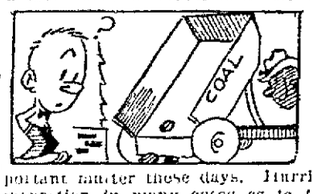

"And take my advice—look inside your laundry bundles. You might find a chunk of mint inside.

"Think what being a millionaire did to me—and keep away from it!"

FRIGIDITY IS TO CONTINUE

With the mercury hovering around the zero point, Monday morning, Lima was given its first taste of what might be termed really cold weather.

It was a reminder to the householder that fuel supply is a very important matter these days. Hurried inspection in many cases as to the conditions existing in coal bins caused S. O. S. calls to be sent out to fuel dealers for first aid. Despite the fact that coal prices are not unusually high at present, a ton of coal look like a mightly little when the capacity of a furnace for devouring it is considered.

Low temperature is to continue tonight, the weather man has it, with cloudy conditions tonight and Tuesday.

Couldn't See Family Starve, Chicago Man Says

CHICAGO — (United Press) — Patrick Tierney, half frozen after streets all day and night after the gored into police headquarters early today and asked for lodging. He was arrested and charged with the brutal murder of his wife and three-year-old son.

Tierney confessed, police said, that he killed his family.

"I only had eighty cents and no job," he said. "I couldn't see the wife and baby starve to death. So I bought a hatchet with the money an dkilled them."

Tierney said he walked the streets all day and night afte rthe murder trying to beg 25 cents.

"I wanted the money to buy poison," he said. "I wanted to die.

"No one would give me a quarter, so here I am."

The mutilated bodies of Tierney's wife and child were discovered by their landlord yesterday.

Mrs. Tierney before her marriage was Marjorie Mahun, daughter of a San Francisco ship captain. She met Tierney at a military ball in 1918.

Joe Vanderman, plumber, 120 W. Wayne-st, told of Roush endeavors to "get the goods" on Irene Allen.

Former Mayor B. H. Simpson stated that in his time foreign rewards at the police station were divided among the men doing the work. There was no secret about it. Fred H. Fisher, former city safer, gave similar testimony.

Frank Eberle, former police sergeant, denied the charge that Roush held out liquor shipped to federal officers. Two bottles were taken out of the box by the Federal marshal and given to himself and Roush, he said.

SOLICITOR, DETECTIVE CLASH

Roy Bowersock and Solicitor Landis exchanged verbal thrusts over the disposition of the Marmon car claimed by Bwersock as a part of the Townsend estate. Landis endeavered to show that Bowersock as administrator concealed the car at the west side fire station.

John Goebel told the commission that neither he nor Roush made a demand for a reward on cars in any shape or form.

The commission may hold a Monday night session to hear arguments on the case.

TELLS OF BONDS

The commission was told by Roush about the Huntertown bonds.

They were placed in the vault at the police station the day they were found. The bank was notified, but did not reply for a long time, according to the witness.

Roush said that he did not erase names from the bonds. The trip to the Dembezey house was made after roll call, Roush and M. F. Dawson testified it was prior to roll call.

A good many of the bonds could not be identified, but were turned over, Roush said. At the station Dawson read off the numbers and Roush put them down in a book, the witness said. He displayed the book.

Roush verified testimony of F. W. Durbin regarding the discovery of the bonds.

The unidentified bonds and stamps amount to $2,960. Roush said in holding them he acted on advice not of Prosecuting Attorney Lippincott, but of Judge Fred C. Becker and Judge Kent Hughes.

"They told me to hold all not identified," Roush declared.

Roush told the commission that he retained the Murphy gin as evidence against a partner of the man arrested and that he still has the six bottles of liquor.

At the time of the investigation he removed it from the station, on advice of counsel. The whiskey was turned over to Snyder and Roush signed the return. He presumed that Snyder would destroy it, he said.

JUDGE JACKSON ON STAND

Judge Emmett J. Jackson, of criminal court, was a material witness for Roush. He said the former chief was not drunk on the Cedar Point trip. Jackson's testimony showed that prior to enactment of the Crabbe law, selling was the only liquor violation for which the police made arrests.

ALIMONY ORDER IS SUSTAINED

Boose Must Pay $100 Month, Appeals Court Rules

Roger Boose, real estate agent, 1026 W. Market-st, must pay his wife, Mrs. Frances Robinson Boose, from whom he is living separate, the amount of $100 a month alimony until January, 1922.

Sixth district court of appeals judges, Toledo, who heard the case here several weeks ago, in their decision Monday, affirmed judgment of common pleas court, handed down by Judge E. R. Eastman, Ottawa, when the trial was first heard here last July.

In the contempt of court proceedings, wherein Boose was to be remanded to jail unless he paid a certain amount by November 10, the high court modified the decision of common pleas court.

Because this modification is contained in an opinion which is to be filed by members of the appellate court and which is being shipped to Lima by express with original papers in the case, exact status of the modification will not be known until the opinion reaches court officers here.

Mrs. Boose charged cruelty, leaving her husband a short time following their marriage, which took place in Parkersburg, West Va., in June, 1920.

"This conference was called," the president reminded the delegates, "with the aim to bring about * * * a general understanding of the critical situation now confronting American agriculture."

While understanding that the conference is not a legislative body, he added, "we do confidently anticipate that the considerations here will be helpful and illuminating to those immediately responsible for the formulating of public policy in dealing with these problems."

The administration had been keenly alive to the situation, he declared, and had given encouragement and support to every measure which it believed was calculated to ameliorate the condition of agriculture. So long as the emergency continues, he said, it must be dealt with as such but at the same time "there is every reason for use or for the permanent modifications of policy which may make relief permanent, may secure agriculture as far as possible against the danger that such conditions will arise again and place it as an industry in the firmest and most assured position for the future."

LARGE ATTENDANCE

Delegates from all sections of the country representing agriculture and industries dependent on agriculture are in attendance at the national conference called to consider the present situation confronting the farmer and to lay down a permanent agricultural policy. Problems of financing, production, distributing and marketing were to be considered during the first five days of the conference allotted to study of emergency relief measures.

About 325 delegates have accepted invitations to sit in the conference, 26 of them being women. Sixty-odd of the delegates represented allied industries dependent upon agriculture and the rest comprise "dirt farmers" state agricultural officials, instructors in state agricultural colleges and editors of farm papers.

ARMS FOR CHINA MAY BE BARRED

Importation Prohibition Measure Before Conference

WASHINGTON — (Associated Press) — As one means of giving effect to its declaration last week in favor of reduction of the Chinese army, the arms conference is considering another resolution looking to prohibition of the importation of arms into China.

The proposition emanated from the American delegation, which went into today's meeting of the far eastern committee prepared to present it formally.

RAIL REPORT READY

The sub-committee on the Chinese Eastern railroad also had a report ready for consideration today and it was indicated that both of these proposals would be disposed of before the committee turned its attention to Siberia, the next subject on the far eastern agenda.

The Chinese Eastern resolution was understood to recommend continuance of the present inter-allied control of the road until more stable conditions are restored in Russia, into whose territory the road crosses from Manchuria.

The arms prohibition plan was acceptable to most of the delegations of the powers and it was indicated also that the Chinese who supported the preceding resolution regarding reduction of China's army, would not interpose any objection.

Meantime, the Chinese and Japanese delegates resumed their Shantung discussions today with prospects that it would require only two or three meetings to reduce the points of difference to a stage where a compromise on the Tsingtao railway issue would bring the whole controversy to an end.

Also the Pacific fortification section of the naval treaty still remained unsettled today, it was predicted by all the delegations that a final agreement would be worked out without serious trouble. It appeared to be the prevailing opinion that the treaty would be presented in final form at a plenary session this week.

WOMAN ON TRIAL

Ohioan Charged With Poisoning Father and Mother

WAUSEON, Ohio — (Associated Press) —The trial of Mrs. Elsie Weber, 20, wife of a well-to-do Fulton-co farmer, charged with having attempted the lives of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Greider, by poisoning last May, was begun in Judge Wolfe's common pleas court here today.

Mr. and Mrs. Greider became suddenly ill after eating a meal prepared by their daughter. A physician pronounced the illness due to poison in the food. Mrs. Weber was arrested and charged with having poisoned the victuals. She was later indicted by the county grand jury.

Since the alleged poisoning incident the families have become reconciled. Mrs. Weber now is at the home of her parents caring for her mother, who is seriously ill.

Her father who is the prosecuting witness against the girl, is said to have employed counsel to defend her against his own charges.

PRE NUPTIAL PROMISES COME TO NAUGHT, MRS. RAMSDELL'S SUIT CHARGES

Charges that her husband, Wesley Reed Ramsdell, compelled her to perform manual labor and required her to work in the fields on his farm, were made by Mrs. Hazel A. Ramsdell, in a suit for divorce, filed in common pleas court Monday.

She said he pictured to her before the marriage a home without interference, where happiness alone would abide. But after the ceremony, Mrs. Ramsdell declared relatives of her husband took charge and made life unbearable for her.

Mrs. Ramsdell relates that her husband failed to provide for her the necessaries of life and medical attention since marriage. Instead, she says, he has choked and abused her.

Ramsdell owns 51 acres of land in Auglaize-tp. His wife said she was forced to seek the home of her parents, who are now supporting her.

They were married June 22, 1920, and on May 30 of the following year, Mrs. Ramsdell says she was forced to leave her husband. She asks restoration to her maiden name of Troop.

WOMAN IS HELD

Slayer of Husband and His Typist Denied Bail

PHILADELPHIA — (Associated Press)—Holding her three-months-old son in her arms and showering him with kisses, as witnesses testified against her, Mrs. Catherine Rosier today was held without bail to await the coroner's inquest on a charge of having slain her husband and his stenographer. The perfunctory hearing before a police magistrate lasted barely ten minutes and her chief concern seemed to be the baby which she wished to take to prison with her.

Mrs. Rosier, an attractive brunette, 21 years old, is charged with having shot her husband, Oscar Rosier, head of an advertising agency, and his stenographer, Mildred G. Reckitt, in his office Saturday afternoon. Rosier and Miss Reckitt died in a hospital several hours later after identifying Mrs. Rosier as the one who shot them.

Mrs. Rosier made no attempt to escape after the shooting which she admitted, declaring that she had warned the girl to keep away from Rosier and that she had fired the shots because she loved her husband.

The STEP on the STAIRS

by ISABEL OSTRANDER

"When his door had closed and he was out of the way I rushed up to her; I don't know what I said; I must have been crazed with jealousy and the mystery of it all. I do remember, tho, quite distinctly, that she turned on me in a cold fury, forbade me ever to address her again, and entering her apartment, shut the door in my face! I descended, locked myself in here almost mechanically, and dropped into that chair you're sitting in now, sergeant.

Craig was sitting back in his chair, with a gesture to Barry, upon the latter stooped forward.

"Mr. Ladd, as I understand it, your apartment here is a replica of the one just above, studio and all. Have you any objection to showing us about?"

"Not at all." In contrast to that of the dead woman's Ladd's studio was hung with rare tapestries and furnished as luxuriously as that of a social dilettante, yet its easel upon which stood an unfinished landscape and the carved refectory table carelessly covered with paint tubes and smeared cloths, showed it to be a workroom no less than hers.

"What color do you call this?" Barry picked up a tube, and squeezing a bit of its contents on the palette, he indicated the blotch of reddish brown.

"Burnt sienna," responded the artist, promptly. "I seldom use it—you can see there was none on the palette before—but I always keep a full assortment of colors on hand. It is odd you should have asked me about that."

"Why?" demanded Barry quickly, for the young man's tone had tensed with sudden emotion.

"Well, it is just a trivial matter, but over a week ago—the last time, in fact, that Mrs. Vane and I had a chummy little talk in her studio—I advised her to use more burnt sienna with the seal brown to get the proper effect of the wood on the staircase in that portrait she was doing of Mrs Vansittart, the one before which her—her own body was found tonight."

Barry replaced the tube reflectively on the table as Craig, with an evident effort to emulate his colleague, picked up one of the bottles and sniffed it speculatively.

"That's turpentine," Ladd remarked, and his voice had sunk again to a dull apathy.

"It's funny about this turpentine," Craig still stood by the table. "It's used as a cleaning fluid, isn't it? Seems to me I've smelt that odor somewhere else in this house tonight."

"Naturally the studio above is connected with it." Barry turned away from the window and let the shade drop. "Mr. Ladd, if you'll just show us thru the rest of your apartment now we won't trouble you any more tonight."

Barry thanked the artist and bade him goodnight. In the hall Craig produced a handkerchief and wiped his ruddy brow.

"Well, John, we've a nice mess to report at headquarters!" he announced in a low tone that the policeman on guard might not hear. "Here's a woman shot dead, and every last tenant in the house except the professor seems mixed up in it somehow, tho every one of them have lied and peached on the rest! Who the devil was this Miriam Vane, anyway? Where did she come from and what were the rest of them to her?"

"I think we can guess what Ladd was," Barry whispered as he led his colleague up the stairs once more. "Just an idealistic young fool who let her play with him like a cat with a mouse to please her vanity and then kicked him out when he became inconvenient. He may have killed her, but I don't think so; I think he would have adored the woman he thought she was and protected her with his last breatth."

"The woman he thought she was!" repeated Craig, pausing on the stairs in his astonishment.

VI

"What are we going upstairs again for?" demanded Craig. "I've got to make my report at headquarters, and it's getting on toward morning."

"You're not going to rouse up old Griswold again, then, and ask him how he lied about his acquaintance with Mrs Vane?" Barry bent a quizzical glance upon the younger sergeant.

"I am not," the other announced with decision. "We have young Childs word for it that Griswold lied, but neither of them were under oath. They're both under guard and in the morning we'll have them on on the carpet and get the truth out of them."

"That's a good idea," approved Barry. "And while you are about it, you might find out what time little Miss Shaw goes out and let the professor know. I fancy he'll be glad to hear."

Craig stared.

"Oh, yes, I forgot that note you had under his door. You said nothing about porch-climbing and such like. You're not putting anything over on me, John?"

"No," Barry smiled.

"I'll put the men on guard outside, so that they won't kick up a rumpus if they see him, like a modern Santa Claus, perambulating the fire escape with his white whiskers waving in the early morning breeze. That note simply asked him to get into the other apartments when he was sure the occupants were gone, and search for traces of a certain chemical compound."

"But we'd only just left Miss Shaw's apartment; we hadn't seen either Griswold's or Ladd's then!" Craig exclaimed beneath his breath. "You don't suspect her, John?"

Barry smiled, but a trifle dryly. The sergeant's footsteps had died away in the quiet night air and then turned to the guard.

"Doane, do you know who I am?"

The patrolman nodded.

"All right," Barry broke in. "I take it that your orders tonight, Doane, are to keep guard outside the apartment here in which the woman was shot unless you hear any suspicious sound within, or see something which you think should be investigated. Is that so?".

"Right, sir," Doane responded.

"Very good. You're going to see and hear something suspicious within five minutes, and that something is going to be me! Understand?"

"I don't, sir," Doane replied. "But what you say goes. You mean you want to have another look around the place? I've orders not to let anybody in, but as long as you're taking the responsibility, the lock is smashed and I can't see every-shadow in this dark hall."

Barry pushed open the broken door, which swung drunkenly on its hinges, and entering the perfumed, littered living room, he found his way to the wall switch and turned on the opalescent lamps.

The little writing desk was open, its profusion of papers scattered on the floor, and the drawers of an almost priceless Chinese cabinet had been forced. Approaching the latter, Barry observed that its contents were mainly scraps of drawing paper on which tiny figures had been scrawled, each with a few deft lines, and picking one up he whistled softly.

It was a miniature caricature, cruel in its sharply defined character delineation, of pompous, good-natured Theodore Vansittart, husband of the woman whose unfinished portrait stood on the easel in the studio, and glancing over the others Barry found like caricatures of several people prominent in the social and political life of the city.

He was turning away from the cabinet when he noticed something which it was obvious that the detectives had overlooked; a small compartment at the top, with a handle formed by a tiny red-gold dragon remained undisturbed.

Barry tugged at the little dragon but it was immovable, the single gilt eye above its snout-like nose seeming to wink mockingly at the futility of his efforts. Something about that eye and the curious formation of its socket gave the sergeant a sudden inspiration, and taking a blunt pencil from his pocket he pressed sharply upon the globule of gilt as upon a bell button.

Instantly the dragon turned inward as upon a spring, the front of the compartment dropped forward on noiseless, unseen hinges and the interior of the small, secret space was exposed.

Mentally congratulating himself that Doane had elected to remain outside, Barry drew forth the contents of the compartment in both hands and carried it carefully to a small table. It was evident enough at last that somewhere beneath the hard, surface brilliancy and devilishly clever, bitter humor of the dead woman there had lurked a humanly sentimental regard for episodes in her life that had vanished from the sophisticated present, for there beneath his hands were clearly mementos of the past, the foolish, faded objects, meaningless to anyone else, which every woman treasures until memory ceases to have value.

A faded blue satin ribbon, stiff and yellowed at the edges, held a knot of crumbling brown sprigs which must once have been flowers; a torn scrap of real lace, discolored now, and too rich in quality for a graduation dress but it might have been a bit of a bridal veil or christening robe once upon a time; a lock of short, curling hair, matted and red-brown; a battered gold locket without initial or inscription; an empty cartridge of .44 caliber, and a small snapshot, alike faded and discolored and half torn across as tho someone had started to destroy it and then thought better of it.

Taking up the faded snapshot he examined it closely. Its faint lines showed the figure of a tall, slender girl clad in a light-colored gown which made it stand out against what appeared to be a mass of shrubbery in full leaf. At her side and reaching to above her knee was a blurred object resembling a huge dog, but the outlines were so indistinct that its breed could not be determined.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

LAND OF EVERYTHING

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Nothing remained but the boots themselves

Nancy and Nick went home after the visit to Soap-Bubble Land with Buskins, because Buskins said that he had an important engagement and would have to leave them. "But if you come out to the orchard tomorrow," he promised them, "I shall meet you under the apple-tree and we'll take a ride up into the sky in our little elevator and see wonders Altho, dear knows, you may see nothing at all, because the place I wish to take you to next is sometimes called Emptyland. But sometimes it is also called the Land of Everything, depending intirely upon Whizzy Tornado. If Whizzy has been at his tricks, blowing things sky high off the earth, you may see everything from milk bottles to barn doors.

"That's where I am going now, to see if there is plenty of room for the poor things to come to when Whizzy gets after them. We fairies keep it cleaned out the very best we can."

Buskins had been shrinking into his high boots all the time he was talking and now nothing remained but the boots themselves, and with a little shake they were gone, too.

The Twins didn't forget what the little fairyman had said, so bright and early next morning they were out under the apple-tree. The Magical Mushroom appeared with Buskins and bringing the Green Shoes. "And I think that I'd better give you another language charm, kiddies," said their dear old friend. "Here you are!" And, as he had done a long time before, he gave the children another piece of the pink lining of his round hat.

When he was gone, the Twins wished themselves up into the little elevator-house at once, followed instantly by Buskins. As before, the little car rose smoothly up between clouds of pink and white blossoms, right into the sky.

THE BAKING POWDER QUESTION SOLVED

Most housewives proclaim that the baking powder question was solved for them the moment they used the first spoonful of Calumet. After that no doubt remained—no hoping—no searching for a perfect leavener—no wondering if bakings would "turn out all right."

CALUMET

has solved the question because in all these thirty years it has never failed to produce wholesome and appetizing foods at an economical cost. It is as pure and sure as any baking powder ever made.

Calumet is more economical than other brands selling for less because its quality is the highest—no losses from spoiled bakings.

Use Calumet once—that's enough to prove to you that it's "best by test."

A pound can of Calumet contains full 16 oz. Some baking powders come in 12 oz. cans instead of 16 oz. cans. Be sure you get a pound when you want it

PASSING OF POPE BENEDICT

FOUR times since the year 1877, the Catholic church has been bereft of its earthly ruling head, in the death of that number of Popes. The passing of Benedict XV, Sunday, removes the highest dignitary of the church, at the Vatican in Rome.

His reign, from 1914 until 1922, was comparatively brief, when considered with others who preceded him. His immediate predecessor, Pius X, served from 1903 to 1914. Leo XIII was consecrated as Pontiff in 1877 and was spared to the church until 1903. His predecessor, Pius IX, was at the head of the Holy See from 1846 to 1877.

"If it pleases the Lord that I shall work again for His church, I am ready; if He says it is enough, let His will be done."

These were the last words of the man who eight years ago was honored in being elevated to the position of Pontiff of the church. Altho having been spared a less length of time than alloted to man—three score years and ten—his life was filled with holy deeds and kindly acts, his mind reflecting holy thoughts and he was loved and respected not only by his own people, but by those of all beliefs.

Born November 21, 1854, at Pegli, in the Diocese of Genoa, Italy, where Christopher Columbus, discoverer of America, first saw the light of day, the life of this good man was one of service. Early in his youth he exhibited a vocation for religious work and was ordained to the priesthood in 1878. His rise was rapid, due to hard work, his zeal and his charity and studiousness.

All the world mourns with the church in the loss of its visible head. The Catholic church is established in all countries, adapting itself to the laws and rules of the various lands, but over all, the Pope, from his seat in ancient Rome, directs, counsels and advises and is looked upon by his followers as infallible in questions of faith and morals.

Sorrow has assailed the hearts of dignitaries of the church, homes of the faithful reflect the gloom that is occasioned by death. Pope Benedict XV well sustained the dignity of the high office he held. Another will be chosen by the Consistory of Cardinals to succeed him. Its servants pass away, but the church goes on, the work being taken up by others.

THE MOSSBACK DANGER

WESTINGHOUSE wireless operators estimate that several hundred thousand persons heard a sermon sent out by radiophone. The preacher was Rev. Dr. Charles Lee Reynolds, pastor of the Park Presbyterian church, Newark, N. J.

After preaching 20 minutes, Rev. Reynolds said to his invisible audience: "At this point in any service I would take up a collection. But I don't see how I can ask my radio congregation to give an offering. And I can't ask you to join in singing a hymn."

In a short time, wireless sending outfits will be as common as wireless receiving stations.

Before Rev. Reynolds is many years older, he may hear an invisible congregation of wireless telephone operators answer him with a hymn sung by several million voices.

TRAINS on Henry Ford's railroad, the D., T. & I., soon will be "dispatched" by wireless. No telegraph wires to blow down, during a blizzard, balling up the service and imperiling life.

Tens of thousands of farmers are getting, every night, the weather forecasts, crop reports and market quotations sent out by wireless telephone by Department of Agriculture.

Twice a month, Uncle Sam's public health service broadcasts a wireless telephone health lecture.

The amateur wireless operator regularly hears grand opera, instrumental concerts and college glee clubs.

Andreas Dippel, veteran opera conductor, arranges to take grand opera stars to every part of America by vaudeville circuit system. He'd better move fast, for at least seven out of 10 Americans soon will be hearing the best opera singers in the world by wireless phone. Who'll pay them? New arrangements must be made.

A STARTLING feature of the suddenly-arrived wireless telephone is that the majority of its followers are boys in knee pants.

Go into a store selling wireless outfits and you'll find six boys to every adult among the customers.

The youngsters caught the idea in a flash and are "going to it."

Meantime, the grown-ups are snoring away, with no definite idea what this "wireless business" is all about.

Adult America will shortly be a mossback, if it doesn't waken. The youngsters are experimenting with wireless wizardy while the rest of us ride in stage coaches.

SALLY IN OUR ALLEY

Of all the girls that are as smart
There's few as smart as Sally,
For it is with consummate art
She bowls 'em down the alley!
She has the grace, she has the form
(The form, I mean, for bowling,)
The very ten-pins fall for her
When Sally starts to rolling!

Each frame she plays, within my frame
She sets the blood to spinning,
What care I if we lose the game?
Her ways are always winning.
No matter what the figures be
Upon the scorer's tally,
She makes a perfect score with me
When bowling down our alley.

And whether Sally hits the pins
Or misses them completely,
There's one thing I am certain of,
She bowls me over neatly;
She's played her game well from the start;
A clever girl is Sally,
She makes a ten-strike on my heart
When bowling down our alley.

HEALTH TALKS

Common Sense Ways to Keep Well

MILK HAS VALUES

Science has long known the value of milk as a food but it is only in recent years that it has been learned that milk contains health-giving vitamines that cannot be found all together in any other food. It is for this reason that dietitions are advising the use of milk in cooking and preparing foods. It is not only to be used as a drink. There are many easily prepared combinations in which milk and cream may be easily used.

Nutrition clinics are advising that children be given a quart of milk to drink each day. Adults should have at least a pint daily.

Then it is possible thru the use of cream soups and creamed vegetables to add to this daily allotment.

Since milk is so healthful because it contains vitamines, the housewife should also consider other foods that are more or less rich in these mysterious little health-giving organisms. Such vegetables as spinach, carrots and turnips—which are among the cheapest—are the richest in vitamines. All green vegetables in season are healthful and should be made the basis of at least one meal a day when possible.

Salads, both vegetable and fruit, are exceedingly healthful. Whole wheat bread should be used by the housewife who is considerate of the health of her family.

It has been argued that the Indians were quite healthy altho they lived on meat almost exclusively. But such an argument does not take into account the fact that the Indians also consumed the heart, liver, kidney and other parts that are rarely eaten by us. Such parts contain the proper amount of vitamines for a healthy diet. It is advisable therefore to vary the diet often with liver or sweetbreads since it has been proved that a man will almost starve on a continuous diet of meat potatoes and white bread.

Increase in Weight!

MILLIONS of people all over the United States and Canada have not only been relieved of the most obstinate forms of dyspepsia and indigestion by the Tanlac Treatment after other remedies have failed, but many of them have reported a remarkable and rapid increase in weight and a return to normal health and strength by its use.

Although Tanlac's claims for supremacy are abundantly supported by the world's leading authorities, it is the people themselves who have really made Tanlac what it is. Millions upon millions have used it with the most gratifying results and have told other millions what it has done for them.

That is THE REASON WHY Tanlac has become the real sensation of the drug trade in the United States and Canada, and that is also THE REASON WHY it is having the largest sale of any medicine of its kind in the world today.

Tanlac is sold in Lima by Hunter's Drug Store and by leading druggists in every town and city.

HAVE COLOR IN CHEEKS

Be Better Looking—Take Olive Tablets

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 17 years of study.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color.

To have a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects.

They start the bile and overcome constipation. Take one or two nightly and note the pleasing results. Millions of boxes are sold annually at 15c and 30c.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

'ROUND LIMA HOUR BY HOUR

WITH APOLOGIES

BY OH. OH. JACKENBIM

A Page from the Diary of an Antiquated Reporter:—Lay long abed after the school children sang America. Belowstairs, tip-toe, so as not to wake poor wife, now doing a 22-hour trick at Red Cross work a-home.

So abroad to greet Zero, but he must have punctured a tire. Waved to Wallace King, commuting from Shawnee in his Beauhic.

There goes a madame around whose name society editors scribble their floweriest benedictions. And gowned in Feldman's super-fashions. Yet they tell me she was trying to reach a sidelight with her dainty Gooding's 'tother night. Age must have its fling, and kicking is coming more and more into style.

This dave I hear of a new City Proclamation against drinking, swearing, spitting and debaucherie on the public streets. Also that the tin cans are to be ordered removed from backyards on East Wayne street. And Charlie Evans says there is too much glassware in the sewage.

To the club for lunch, and Ed. Stolzenbach stringing me about chemists working night and day and charging a dollar a quart. Jim Morton giving the Better Business club a gas attack. Hank Simonton came out for air. Gayly greeted by E. H. Kettler; we used to neighbor on South McDonel.

So back to the office and highly complimented by a call from a bond salesman. That's twice in my life it's happened, and I couldn't buy a differential if Cadillacs were selling at pre-war prices.

Up to the Norval to welcome Brooks Fletcher, the lectuer; but he coming by the Erie and the clerk not sure he would arrive. In for a discourse with Charlie Hiatt; and he busied, selling neckties, and to a woman whose husband I know well. And methinks how mad he will be. Back to the office to find a letter, inviting me as a partner into telephony. Howard Dean is giving somebody a bum steer.

Met with Joe Lemkuhl, the telegrapher, suffering keenly from blindness; but he improving, making me joyful thereat.

Home via the Avenue, smiling at my friend's wife; she in her closed coach of the accident. Hired a chauffeur who thot he should wash the windows. Next day madame seeing one whom she would salute, the glass was so clear she ran her heade thru it. Cancelled all social engagements and escaped to St. Rita's for a week. And so to bed with my mind at peace.

FINALLY FOUND HERSELF! NOW SHE DESIGNS "CHICKEN STYLES"

DORIS REID

By RUTH ABELING

NEW YORK — Miss Doris Reid is a designer of "chicken styles."

"It started on Sunday—oh, fully nine years ago!" says Miss Reid, who is slim and tall and blond. "I decided on Sunday that I must have a career and that New York was the place to find it.

"By Wednesday I was in New York—had come all the way from Toronto, my home. And for two months I walked the streets looking for a job.

"Finally I got one with the Selwyns in "Rock-a-bye Baby." I couldn't dance and I couldn't sing. But I held that job one season and then was out looking again.

"Edna Wallace Hopper found me a place as stock girl in a gown shop.

"There," Miss Reid laughed, "I made the mistake of trying to sell when I was supposed to just do the slavey's work. Fired again!

"Next I went to Lucile's and was given a position modeling.

"I was there probably a year when I decided that it wasn't the stage, it wasn't selling, it wasn't modeling that I wanted to do but that I wanted to take the colors and design the gowns myself!

"So with one customer I gave up my job and started to make that one dress in my bedroom!"

"Of course, the moral of this all is," says Miss Reid, "that girls shouldn't lose courage when they fail at one thing, because it probably isn't the thing they are best adapted to anyhow.

"Color and line mean something to me.

"For instance, lavender is the color for sports wear. Why? Because in sport clothes a woman should be light, airy, easy. Translate those three words into color and you have lavender!

"Blue, in almost any tone except baby blue, is the color for morning wear—there's composure about blue, start the day well.

"Mulberry and the new, very vivid tones of red are the colors for the woman who would fascinate. They arrest, they hold attention.

"Black and white are good for evening attire for the mature woman who would create a sense of well being; pure white for the youthful woman who would make her youthfulness her chief charm.

"Green—wear green when you re feeling a bit stupid and brown when you feel too frivolous. They re balancers."

Chicken Style Tips for Little Women

(BY DORIS REID)

Wear the quaint.

Wear tight bodices, well cut. Small women wear them better than large women.

Wear no draping from the shoulder.

Wear distinct waist line effects.

Wear irregular hem lines until they are hopelessly out of date! The more points the better.

ENGAGEMENT RINGS

Time was when a half hoop of diamonds was considered the height of feminine bliss! Now half hoops are too dreadfully old-fashioned! It must be all the way round or nothing! A circlet of diamonds set in platinum, tiny pearls and emeralds put in with diamond dust are quite the smart and fashionable thing!

BANDEAUX

Garland of flat Victorian flowers are good as evening hair ornaments and among the debutantes one sees very Wendy-ish circlets of gay berries and foliage. But do be careful in fastening them. Don't stint the hairpins! It's too dreadful to have one's hair circlet slipping toward one's nose during the dance.

FRINGE

Chenile fringe, all of two feet long, is used on the collars of some of the new evening wraps. So heavily does the fringe hang that it quite conceals the material of the garment under it.

RAISIN BREADS

They are Nice to Serve With Tea, Jam or Marmalade

Quick light breads are always nice to serve with afternoon tea or may be served with jam or marmalade to take the place of dessert for the family dinner.

Housekeepers often forget that the sweet may be introduced early in the meal and a fancy dessert made unnecessary.

Freshly baked raisin brown bread and cherry or strawberry preserves would make dessert quite "de trop,"

RAISIN BROWN BREAD

Two eggs, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 cup granulated sugar, 1-2 cup molasses, 3 cups graham flour, 1 1-2 cups white flour, 2 cups sour milk, 2 teaspoons soda, 1 cup raisins.

Beat eggs well. Beat in salt and sugar and add molasses. Add graham flour and mix thoroly. Add one cup milk. Dissolve soda in remaining cup of milk and add to mixture. Sift flour over raisins and stir into better. Be sure that the whole is perfectly blended. Pour into 3 one-pound baking powder cans which have been well buttered and floured. Bake an hour in a hot oven.

RAISIN WHITE BREAD

One-half cup sugar, 1 egg, 1 1-2 cups milk, 4 cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 cup seeded and chopped raisins, 1-2 teaspoon grated lemon rind.

Beat egg well. Beat in salt and sugar. Mix and sift flour and baking powder and add alternately with milk to first mixture. Stir in raisins. Turn into buttered and floured baking powder cans. Put in a warm place and let rise twenty minutes. Bake forty-five minutes in a hot oven.

RAISIN SCONES

If friends come in and there doesn't seem much for dinner make these raisin scones and serve them hot.

One and one-half cups flour, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1-2 teaspoon cream of tartar, 1-2 teaspoon soda, 1 egg, 1-3 cup cold water, 1-2 cup seeded and chopped raisins, 1-4 teaspoon salt.

Mix and sift flour, sugar, salt, soda and cream of tartar. Rub in butter with fingers. Beat egg till light with 1-3 cup of water and cut into flour. If not soft enough to roll add more water. Cut in raisins. Roll about three-eighths of an inch thick and cut with a cookie cutter. Bake in a hot oven.

RAISIN HOT CAKES

Serve these with maple sirup some Sunday night for supper or as dessert after a light dinner.

Two cups sour milk, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 1-4 teaspoons soda, 2 1-4 cups white flour, 1-4 cup corn meal, 1 egg, 1-2 cup seeded and chopped raisins.

Mix and sift flour, salt and soda. Beat egg well and add sour milk. Add raisins to first mixture and stir in milk and egg. Beat till thoroly mixed and then do not stir. Drop by spoonfuls on a hot, well greased griddle.

LETTERS TO LOVERS

BY WINONA WILCOX

BELATED ROMANCE

Romance is not all for the young. Comes this from a widow, a mother and a successful business woman:

"Three children, a debt of $10,000 and two small business enterprises were left to me by my husband many years ago. The debt I have paid by my own endeavor, the children I have educated, the businesses are both prosperous.

"Several men have proposed to me, but I could not marry on account of my children. I had my own ideas about rearing them, my own ambitions for them.

"Now my birds have flown from the nest. I am alone and to me, at 50 and more, has come a suitor. But I cannot decide to take him.

"I first met this man more than two decades ago. He was then just divorced from his first wife Later he married and is now a widower. We renewed our acquaintance a year ago at the house of a friend.

"Then he went home but he now says that I was continually in the back of his mind and after a few months he could endure it no longer and so he wrote asking to come to see me. He hadn't supposed he ever could be interested in a woman again.

"I detest divorce and so does he, and his first wife is still living. His divorce is all that keeps us from enjoying the companionship we both need.

"He is not interested in my property. He has more than I have and he requests me to make all of mine over to my children in case we marry.

"He is tired of being alone and so am I. But that divorce of the long ago has its influence upon me. And it has always seemed so silly to me to consider a wedding ceremony when a funeral service is more appropriate."

Now isn't that the most delightful story of human emotion yet outlined in this series?

It seems almost impertinent to offer an opinion to a woman who has made such a success of both her business and her family life. She can not have had much leisure for personal happiness in her busy life, therefore it would appear sensible for her to grasp what the years now offer.

Marriage at 50 is not at all the simple thing it is at 20, nevertheless older people often get a splendid comfort out of a late wedding, if they make a harmonious combination.

On the other hand, there is no domestic misery to compare with that provided in an ill-assorted late marriage.

Obviously, in age as in youth, the success of matrimony depends altogether upon the character of the parties who undertake it. Most marriages would turn out extremely well if only men and women would be about 50 per cent as kind and wise as they pretend to be.

SUSIE SMART'S ADVICE

Dear Miss Smart:

I have a very perplexing problem. Several months ago I met a man and fell deeply in love with him. I think the world and all of him and would do anything in the world for him. He has paid me quite a bit of attention and has been very good to me. Recently I found that he is married and has a small daughter. I know this to be a positive fact, as I was informed by very reliable authority. However, I care for him regardless. I do think, tho, that I should tell him I know that he is married. Don't you feel that way too? I don't want to say anything to hurt his feelings. What do you think I could say without hurting him?

"In Need of Advice."

NOT hurt his feelings! My dear girl what is wrong with you and where in the world are your reasoning powers? You are very considerate and kind in your desire to spare this man any humiliation or embarrassment when informing him that you know the truth about him—what a deceitful, unprincipled coward he has been. But do you honestly feel that he would be so considerate of you? Of course he wouldn't! Do not feel so much concerned over hurting his feelings. No doubt, he will survive the shock of learning that you know he has no right whatsoever to make love to you.

A man who pays attention to any woman other than his wife and who would be so unfair and unprincipled as to lead you to care for him, in the belief that he is unmarried, deserves no consideration nor kindness from you. All he can offer you is unhappiness. If you continue to accept his attentions after knowing that you have no right to receive them and he in turn has no right to offer them, you will be far in the wrong. The only proper course open for you is to repulse all his attentions hereafter and refuse to see him at all.

Dear Miss Smart:

(1) I am a girl of 16. I have light blue eyes, dark hair, and am light complexioned What colors would be best for me to wear? (2) I went with a young man of 18 for a few months. I cared very much for him. I was told he was going with another girl and taking her to other towns and to the picture shows Do you think he cares for me, or do you think he goes with her because he loves her. Should I go back to him again if he him as a friend? (3) Am I too him as a friend? (3) Am I too young to go with boys? (4) How old should a girl be before she can marry? (5) My girl friend is 16 and has been going with a boy occasionally this winter He comes over on Sunday evenings but doesn't go with her until the picture show is over then he takes her home Do you think he loves her, or do you think he goes with her merely for pastime?

Blue Eyes.

(1) Those which you can wear best. (2) If only I could tell what people think of each other I would be famous, instead of just Susie Smart. Of course, if this young man showers all his attentions upon this girl whom you mention, neglecting your friendship and forgetting entirely about your feelings, I do not think he can possibly care much for you. He is not worthy of any great consideration from you Speak friendly to him and be pleasant, but I think it advisable for you to refuse to accept any attentions from him. (3) You really are very young to be concerned much with the boys Now is the time for you to make the most of your opportunities for a better education and to make the most of your schooling. Wait for a while before going out much with the boys. A girl cannot do justice to her school work when her thoughts are filled with the boys. (4) There really is no set age. Much depends upon the girl, the man to whom she is betrothed, his financial condition and many other things. However, little girls of 15 years shouldn't be worrying about such things. (5) Evidently your friend's friend is somewhat shrewd and wise in business propositions. He waits until the movies are over and then asks to escort your friend home. There must be "method in his madness." Perhaps he feels that during the unfortunate financial depression a "dutch treat" is the better plan. I could not say whether the young man "loves" her. I can say, however, that a young girl of 16 is much too young to be in love and that she should put such silly nonsense out of her thoughts

POLLY AND PAUL --AND PARIS

By Zoe Beckley

FIASCO

Polly could have torn the frock to pieces in the frenzy of vexation that overwhelmed her. It was not only the lost 800 franc, plus the tax which brought the thing in American money to nearly seventy-five dollars, that hurt. It was the devastating disappointment — and the realization that she had been deceived and cheated.

She had supposed you couldn't get bad clothes in Paris any more than you could get poor food. Yet there was this awful frock, which bulged where it should have receded and was stiff where it should have been soft and supple! It made her look like a Dutch market woman.

Why hadn't she been firm and sacrificed her hundred-franc deposit rather than go on with the order and have this hideous rag to show for it!

She got up and began to drag the frock off. She would use her own little money for it . . . She would bundle it up and send it to her poor cousins back home. Paul need know nothing about her humiliating failure.

But before she had it off, Paul came in.

"Hello, dearest, what doing — dressing to go out? * * Why, what red eyes, dear! What's happened to my girl?"

"Oh, Paul, don't ask. I wanted to get rid of the thing before you came and not have to tell you what a fool I've made of myself." Polly's tears burst out afresh. Paul took her in his arms.

"Tell me, darling. You know there's nothing you could do that would make you seem a fool to me. What is it?"

Polly told her woeful story.

"And look at the thing!" she ended, with a despairing gesture, turning round and round for inspection.

"What's the matter with it? Seems pretty good to me. Gee, what lovely ankles you've got, Polly!"

"But Paul — how can you say it's all right! Don't you see what a—"

"Aw, come on! Stick some powder on your nose and let's go for a walk. I've had a tussle at the office today. Let's forget it."

"My head aches, I just can't go walking, I—I'm too m-mis-miserable—" And down upon the bed again flung Polly, her self-control quite gone, her nerves in the grip of hysteria.

Paul stood a moment gazing in astonishment. Then it came to him that she really was miserable, that the disappointment had gone deep and the sense of being to blame, of having done an unwise, ill-judged thing, was not a trifle, after all. He knew how that was in business. He had been guilty of something rather similar at the office that very day.

"Polly," he crept softly to the bed and put his hand on her hot forehead. "Forgive me, my own girl. I understand. And let me tell you something:

"You're going to give that dress to the janitor's wife (there must be a janitor somewhere), and you're going tomorrow to the best gown-maker in Paris and get yourself frocked out like an empress (do empresses dress well, dear?) and you're not going to give a d—a dime what it costs because you're my wife, and the most beautiful woman in America, and I'm going to have my wife fixed up right.

"And now you and your husband are going to walk on the Champs Elysees, and then take a cab to Marguery's and have green turtle soup and filet de sole and pressed duck and champagne and strawberry ice.

"If you don't look up and kiss me this instant I shall—go with the janitor's wife!"

When sugar is kept in the paper sack in which it is purchased, trouble is often the result. The bag slits open, spilling its contents. And when crackers are kept in a paper sack they often become soft.

The solution lies in getting a small square can, on which can be printed "CRACKERS", and a small round can on which can be painted "SUGAR." Maybe your grocer can give you these cans.

NICK ALTROCK RECALLS SOME RARE BITS OF IVORY THAT HAVE OCCURRED IN MAJOR LEAGUES RECENTLY

(BY NICK ALTROCK)

WHAT do I regard as the biggest, bone" play in baseball?

There have been so many ivory stunts pulled of late years that it is rather hard to decide.

Stealing third base with the bases filled is always worth a laugh. A lot of players have pulled that stunt. However, to John Anderson, who seems to have been the first player to do it, goes whatever dishonor is due him. It is rather embarrassing to steal a base and find some one there.

Failure to touch a base, and then being called out, usually provokes a laugh from every one but the players and managers of the team affected.

Fred Merkle a smart ball player, failed to touch a base in 1908. In almost every game in the majors some player does the same trick. Some escape, others are caught at it. If the neglect to touch the base has no effect on the score it is forgotten.

Merkle was unfortunate. His play cost the New York team the pennant, and with it the right to play in the world series That made it a very costly mistake. That play is generally regarded as the biggest bone in baseball, simply because it was so costly.

When a player bats out of order and is called out for so doing, it makes the player feel like taking to the woods. If the player makes a base hit, it is all the tougher because the athletes like their base hits. If the player happens to make a home run while hitting out of order, it is well nigh a catastrophe.

Last year in a game at Washington Harry Heilman hit the ball into the far end of the left field bleachers. It was a terrific drive, the first time a ball was ever hit into that stand. Then it was discovered that Heilman had batted in place of Veach. The two players had been transferred in the batting order and were not notified of the change.

Heilman of course was in no way to blame. It was not a boner as far as he was concerned. However, it was longest "boner" I ever saw made, I am positive of that.

Baseball is such an intricate game that it constantly offers chances to err. Boners" are part of the game. To me, however, the day Doc Gessler caught a fly ball in the ninth with a couple of runners on the bases and ran to the club house thinking the game was over, when in reality only two were down, was the funniest boner I can recall in the history of the game. There was real humor to that stunt.

Billy Evans says

THERE have been few great ball teams that have lacked high-class men at short and second

* * *

Pitching is conceded by most experts to be 70 per cent of a team's strength. There is no denying the great value of pitching.

* * *

Pitching, however, doesn't get very far without a good inner defense. Such a defense is impossible without crack men at short and second.

* * *

The Cubs in the days of Frank Chance, had Tinker at short and Evers at second. That was some pair around the keystone sack. The Chicago Cubs was one of the greatest teams of all time.

* * *

Take the Philadelphia Athletics when that team was at its best, Jack Barry was doing the shortstopping. Eddie Collins was at second No two players ever worked together better than Barry and Collins.

* * *

Without a question shortstop is the most difficult position on the ball field. A good shortstop must not only have ability but brains as well. There was never a great shortstop who couldn't think

* * *

A majority of the plays on the infield have the shortstop figuring in their execution. Little things often lose ball games. Many a game is lost because of the failure to properly execute double plays.

* * *

The double play feature is what makes the positions of shortstop and second base so important. Last summer I saw a score of games lost because of the failure to complete a double play that would have retired the side.

* * *

All of which leads up to the reason why the Washington club should be a factor in the American League race this season. It is strong at short and second

The acquisition of Peckinpaugh makes Washington a contender. There is no better shortstop in either major league than Peckinpaugh. Stanley Harris at second need bow to no one but Eddie Collins.

* * *

That means that the three big minor leagues of the country have arrayed themselves together against the two major leagues, as well as the minor organizations who took on the draft with favor.

* * *

There are two sides to every question. It is very easy to justify the position of the three big minor leagues. Within the last three months some of the clubs have received as much for one player as they would get under the draft in a dozen years for that many players.

* * *

The San Francisco club received $75,000 for O'Connell. If the draft had been in force the very best O'Connell would have brought would have been $7,500, just one-tenth of the amount actually received.

* * *

It is easy to figure why the Pacific Coast League would decide to turn down the draft by merely applying the rules of common sense to that one particular case Why bind yourself to a contract that makes the limit of your possibilities $7500 when you can get 10 times that much by being a free lance?

* * *

Then there is the other side, the barrier that such a scheme sets up between the player and the goal of his ambition, working his way up to the big league. Likewise, it eliminates the chance of gradual progression that is open to the players from the smallest minor organization up to the big league

* * *

The player is really the hardest hit by the failure to agree on a draft rule With the present method the majors take a chance only on the player who they feel have a fair chance to deliver The promising player who seems to have ability but lacks experience and polish is overlooked

* * *

The player also suffers from the standpoint of salary Made the minors pay good money they must keep salaries in proportion to the gate. The attendance and the prices at the minor league games, even the "Big Three" who have opposed the draft, in no way compares with the major league standards. Once again the player suffers.

* * *

It will be interesting to note the attitude that the majors take at the February meeting The minor leagues who have opposed the draft have come out in the open. Will the majors accept the dictation without fighting back? I seriously doubt it

* * *

It is a well-known fact that the American Association, the International League and the Pacific coast would like a major league rating. There is a chance that some very interesting things may develop in baseball before the opening of the 1922 campaign.

Madden Is Due Here Tuesday

Art Madden, the Kalamazoo, Mich., featherweight who fights Jake Gross at Memorial Hall Friday night, is due to arrive in Lima Tuesday to finish training for the bout which will be the main go of a lively card arranged by the Lima Gym.

Billy Randall, manager of Madden, wired Charley Maxwell, matchmaker, Monday that he and his boy will leave the upstate city tonight and their destination.

Maxwell will have a gymnasium ready for the two when they arrive. He is considering the St. Elmas and the Manufacturer's Supply Co. gyms, inasmuch as they are the two nearest the uptown district.

CAN HE MAKE WEIGHT

Madden will have a hard time making 128 pounds and will have to train down excessively. Road work will be the main part of his program.

Jim Hendricks, manager of "Red" McDonald, says he does not believe Madden can make the weight At any rate he wants to challenge the winner of the bout with McDonald, the same sorrel top who fought a draw with Gross here the night of December 30.

GROSS MUST WORK

Gross has a heavy training program ahead of him for the week. Wednesday night he will cater down to lighter work and Thursday will simply work for an hour or two to keep his muscles limbered up.

No word has been received from K. O. Jeakle or Toughey Ramsey, but they will likely blow in sometime Thursday night or Friday morning

"Pig Iron" Turner has deserted the railroad this week so as to get in the best of shape to fight "Red" Young, the boy who says he is going to knock Turner a cookoo.

SPORTING SPLINTERS

NO American League player has ever stolen 100 bases. Ty Cobb came closest, in 1915 when he pilfered 96.

CATCHER Bill Killifer of the Cubs is the only playing manager in the National League.

CRITICS are disagreed as to whether Sam Jones or Waite Hoyt is the best curve ball pitcher in the American League. Both have great "hooks" derhand delivery Unlike Carl Mays, he works it only occasionally.

IN the National League when a player is dissatisfied with his salary, he threatens to retire, and at the same time expresses a desire to play in New York. The latest example is Eddie Roush.

DETROIT must be able to plug up the holes at short and second, or Ty Cobb is going to find it a difficult matter to prove to the public that he is as good a manager as batter.

THE New York Giants now boast of the two best third basemen in the National League. It is a toss-up as to who McGraw will shift to second base, Frisch or Groh, since he cannot use both of them at third

THE New York Nationals will miss George Burns in the outfield. Had there been more color to Burns he would have been one of the most talked about players in the game.

JOE DUGAN is said to be slated for shortstop at Boston. Joe hates that position. He likes third and is one of the best in the business at that position. It is doubtful if he will be nearly so successful at short

NATIONAL LEAGUE players, unless they keep their heads up, will find Babe Pinelli of the Cincinnati Reds one of the greatest exponents of the hidden ball trick in the country. He caught many a base runner asleep during his stay in the American.

WITH a hard hitting club like New York, Sam Jones, the crack pitcher recently acquired from the Red Sox, should have the greatest season of his career. Jones is one of the leading pitchers of the American League He is certain to win at least twenty games.

THE loss of Joe Dugan, and the acquisition of Outfielder Miller and Pitcher Acosta of Washington hasn't strengthened the playing ability of the Athletics, but undoubtedly it fattened Connie's bank roll.

BABE RUTH says that Shocker of the St. Louis club is the most troublesome pitcher in the American League for him to hit.

GASNER of the Pittsburg club is the only pitcher in the National League who uses an un-

Must Curb Professionalism In College Football, Says Rockne

By K. K. ROCKNE

PROFESSIONALISM is the big menace to college football.

Unless the tendency in that direction is curtailed it may be necessary to abolish the game as an inter collegiate sport.

Some stringent methods must be adopted by the colleges to keep the promoter from luring the college men into pro football.

Football has taken a wonderful hold on the public in the last 10 years. If its popularity is to continue, professionalism and the gambler must be eliminated.

SPORTS HINDERED

Horse racing, boxing and wrestling have all come under the influence of the promoter and gambler who seek only gain

Baseball was given a severe blow in 1919 by the Chicago White Sox scandal. The men behind baseball were quick to realize the great danger. Drastic action was taken. It immediately restored the faith of public.

Football is now facing the danger that results from professionalism. Precautions must be taken. The game must be safeguarded. Football must be kept a sport for the schools, colleges and amateurs.

Recently a rumor came that certain Notre Dame players had played with a professional team on Sunday. An investigation was made. It was impossible to get newspaper men and alumni who had seen the game to testify.

PLAYERS CANNED

The Notre Dame board, however, had enough evidence to justify the guilt of the men. They were called before the board and confessed. They admitted they had fallen for the lure of money as held out to them by the professional promoter.

These men were expelled from athletics. The faculty man who investigated the case for Notre Dame discovered a number of other college stars played in that Sunday game. So far no action has been taken in their case.

The fact that three Notre Dame players were caught and expelled for having played pro football is in itself not so much of an item.

The Notre Dame players were simply more unfortunate than a number of other college stars who have done the same thing and gotten away with it.

Professionalism in football must be stamped out. The future of the game as a college sport depends on it. It is up to us to see that it is eliminated.

Shady Grid Games On Retreat

NEW YORK.—When President Lowell of Harvard University, made his now famous statement about the abuses of football, he scored a first down, but he has yet to make the goal.

This, in general, is the view of the majority of college presidents and athletic officials interviewed in nation-wide polls conducted by the United Press.

Princeton backed up Harvard in its stand but Yale adopted a reserved attitude. Other schools in the east generally favored President Lowell's suggestions for the betterment of intercollegiate athletic competition. Columbit, which returned to intercollegiate football in 1916 after an 11-year absence, stood by that action.

BACK UP ATHLETICS

Members of the western conference, or "big ten" generally pointed with pride to their organization as an example of properly regulated intercollegiate athletics in actual practice. The south also generally regarded it as "about time" for the east to "clean house" in athletic matters.

"It is gratifying to note how ruffianism is being stamped out of athletics and manlintss encouraged," says Dr. S. V. Sanford, president of the Southern Athletic Association and faculty director of athletics at the University of Georgia.

WILLING TO COOPERATE

"I am willing to cooperate in any movement to minimize the undue emphasis placed on football contests, said John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton.

"Western conference teams are limited to seven games a year as compared with 10 or 12 games in the east and are therefore away ahead of the eastern teams," said L. W. St. John, director of athletics at Ohio State University.

The same view of the success of the western conference restrictions was taken by President W. A. Jessup, of Iowa, and President Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern University.

DON'T CONSIDER IT

Minnesota, Wisconsin and Indiana Universities reported that they have not considered the question.

Charles F. Thwing, president emeritus of Western Reserve University said that he believed that athletics ranked with intellectual, moral and religious ideals, as the great purpose of American colleges. But sports should not be allowed to develop excessively, he said.

President F. C. Hicks, of the University of Cincinnati, found no fault with inter-collegiate athletics at Cincinnati and the Rev. Herbert C. Noon, president of Marquette University, agreed with Dr. Hucks.

ALTROCK TELLS OF GAME'S MOST COMICAL PLAY

(By NICK ALTROCK)

I HAVE seen many funny things on the ball field that it is hard for me to pick out the worst bit of foolishness.

Usually when something funny happens on the ball field, a bone-headed play is the basis for it.

That was the situation in the funniest stunt I ever saw pulled.

I DIDN'T DARE LAUGH

However, I didn't dare laugh about it until the game was over. It was a near-tragedy for Clarke Griffith, who was then managing the team. At the time, he was ready to murder the umpires in charge.

It was staged in Chicago. Washington was playing the White Sox and the score was close. It looked as if the ball game would be decided by a one-run margin, as both pitchers were working smoothly.

With two men out, Frank Ellerbe, now with S. Louis but who was playing shortstop for us then, reached second base. With Eddie Gharrity, one of our best batters, up it look as if we had a chance for a run.

CLEARED THE SCREEN

Gharrity came thru with a long drive to left field that cleared the bleacher screen. It was a real homo run if there ever was one. Ellerbe, off with the crack of the bat, had rounded third as the ball sailed into the bleachers.

The crowd loudly cheered the wallop as it cleared the screen. Ellerbe, running with his head either down or up, decided the left fielder had caught the ball and the cheers were for his great play.

As Ellerbe rounded third and was half way to the plate, he suddenly turned, and raced to his position at short, passing Gharrity on the base lines.

The umpires ruled Gharrity out for passing a base runner

It was a very technical decision, but it went, despite about 10 minutes of protesting on the part of Griffith. Gharrity was credited with only a two-base hit. We won the game 5 to 4. I believe, so had plenty of laughs over it that evening. However, it never was funny to Eddie Charrity.

In tomorrow's service Altrock tells what he regards as baseball's biggest "bone-head" play.

Cleveland To Have Amateur Boxing Again

CLEVELAND — Revival of amateur boxing in Cleveland, barred by Mayor Fred Kohler, Saturday night seemed probable for the near future, possibly early next week.

A statement from the mayor indicated he would appoint a secretary to have complete control of all clerical work relative to the fighting

"I'll name a secretary to handle the clerical end of the sport and then everything will be set for the youngsters to go at their sport once more," Kohler declared.

FISTS MUST WAIT

Professional boxing, however must wait. City authorities are not satisfied with the manner in which it has been conducted and will postpone lifting of the ban until thoro investigation is made.

Several amateur boxing cards were cancelled under the mayor's orders last week, including the proposed inter-city matches arranged between Montreal and Cleveland scrappers. This card is expected to be scheduled as soon as the ban is lifted.

MUCH IS EXPECTED

Cleveland, known as one of the nation's best sight cities, is expected to regain its place in the fight world as soon as the mayor names a boxing commission, or a commission, to regulate all matches. Kohler is determined that boxing henceforth shall be "open and above board."

He seeks to prevent recurrence of the irregularities which grew out of the Kilbane-Frush, and Downey-Wilson fights early last fall.

Ballads —OF— Baseball

BY GEO. MORIARTY

HURRY up there, Winter!
Beat it, show some pep!
I'm a guy that's young and spry,
And wants to make a rep.
Got my togs all ready
For the training fun;
I'm all set to show some vet
That I can hit and run.

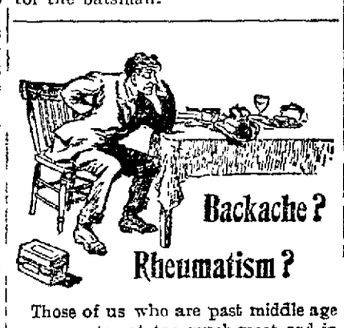

HURRY up there, Winter!
Cut this ice and snow!
Can't you see I'm filled with glee,
And rarin' just to go?
Seems a generation
Since I dove and slid
To a base on my face;
Hurry up, old kid!

WINTER, quit your loafing!
Give young Spring a chance!
I can't wait to touch the plate,
And slaughter some one's slants.
Hurry, get a move on!
Don't grab all the fame'
Cut the stall: c'mon, play ball.
You're holding up the game.

Query A Day, By Evans

What happens when the umpire is hit by a batted ball on which no play has been made?

IF the umpire is hit by a batted ball on which no play has been made, the batsman is entitled to first base, but no runners can advance unless forced to make room for the batsman.

Those of us who are past middle age are prone to eat too much meat and in consequence deposit lime-salts in the arteries, veins and joints. We often suffer from twinges of rheumatism or lumbago, sometimes from gout, swollen hands or feet. There is no longer the slightest need of this, however, as the new prescription, "Anuric," is bound to give immediate results as it is many times more potent than lithia, in ridding the impoverished blood of its poisons by way of the kidneys. It can be obtained at almost any drug store, by simply asking for "Anuric" for kidneys or backache. It will overcome such conditions as rheumatism, dropsical swellings, cold extremities, scalding and burning urine and sleeplessness due to constant arising from bed at night.

Send to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for a ten-cent trial pkge. Ask your druggist for Dr. Pierce's Anuric (kidney and backache remedy).

HAROLD LLOYD'S SALARY IS PLACED AT $1,800,000

(BY ESTHER WAGNER.)

HAROLD LLOYD'S new contract with Pathe is said to call for $300,000 for each picture and the production of six pictures a year. That would make his income $1,800,000 a year. That is more than the fixed sum called for by Chaplin's contract.

However, Lloyd will have to pay the cost of production of his pictures. And Chaplin is paid a percentage above a certain gross on his pictures. Therefore, it is highly probable that Chaplin's salary is greater than Lloyd's.

But $1,800,000 sounds big, stupefying, in these days when many in the industry say that admissions must come down and that the first step toward that end is the reduction of star salaries.

Yet when one considers the merit of the entertainment offered by Chaplin, Lloyd and Keaton as compared to that offered by stars of screen dramas, it appears that they should receive much larger salaries.

The comedian is an individual entertainer. He is constantly in the action in every picture in which he appears. His own acting is the criterion of his films.

Few stars of the dramas can "hog" picture after picture without becoming boresome. The story is still the thing in drama while the star is paramount in comics. That is because the comic star is recognized in his own individuality. If the dramatic star were thus recognized the drama would be marred.

Miss Young Has a Clever Story

DON'T know exactly what your opinion will be, but I think that in "Straight From Paris," Clara Kimball Young has one of the best—if not THE best—picture of her entire career. Her work is sincere and natural, she is beautifully gowned thruout the picture and is exquisite to look at.

Isn't that a clever title? The little milliner comes straight from Paris. The mother of the young man who wants to marry her doubts if she can be—Straight? From Paris? But in the various workings of the story and before the finale, it is established beyond all possible doubt that she IS straight—and from Paris. Which brings us back to where we started.

The clever Lucette, a little milliner, comes to America and at once has the lead over everyone. She is beautiful and gracious and the men flock around like bees. Especially one, young Mr. Van Austen, played by Bertram Grassby. He's the one whose mother can hardly be convinced that the lady from Paris is—as we said. Don't imagine that she marries the young man, for she doesn't. You see, it turns out that he isn't so much after all—but his UNCLE—watch Lucette!

The case is well chosen. The sets are fine, and all other points are right up to snuff. Really, if you're any kind of fan at all, you'll be crazy about "Straight From Paris."

It's at the Lyric theatre today and until Thursday.

The Cosmopolitan Picture "Back Pay"

TAKING everything into consideration, I've enjoyed the production of "Back Pay" more than any picture seen in weeks. Don't know that you'd call it great, or anything like that, but it do hit the spot nevertheless.

Seena Owen, long a favorite, is the heroine about whom the entire plot revolves. She is cast as Hester Ferms a small town girl with a small-town lover Hester, having what she terms a crepe de chine soul seeks the bright lights and in the course of five years becomes one of the most brilliant women in her set. And she thinks she is happy now that she has achieved the things for which she has always longed.

You know tho, that the country lover will stage a come-back. He does or rather she goes back to him, but small town life and its accompanying disadvantages hold no lure for the gorgeous Hester and she goes back to New York and Wheeler, to his parties, his roses, his motors, etc.

Then the war, and Jerry, the lover, is sent home an invalid. With but three weeks to live. Hester does the one decent thing in her life and marries him, thus making his last hours happy. And after that—remorse, regrets, and a final decision to forsake the life she has led and start over. Really the ending is rather abrupt and unlooked for and hardly the kind of ending one would have it.

The story, by Fannie Hurst, is bound to hold your interest. The cast, with Matt Moore, and J Barney Sheery is splendid. The director knew his business; the lighting and photography is exquisite thruout.

So "Back Pay" can be classified as a remarkably good program, picture, a little slow, perhaps, but first rate entertainment.

It's showing at the Faurot.

Tom Mix In "The Night Horsemen"

AFTER you sit thru the five or six reels of "The Night Horsemen" in which Tom Mix is starred you wonder how in the world he has escaped this long and why every one of his 208 bones are not broken to bits, and Tom's along ... Tom must have a special guardian angel so we may continue to look for Mix thrillers. Long ... stay on the job.

In "The Night Horsemen" Mr Mix is seen as Whistling Dan, a child of the wilds who when he ... his eyes turn yellow, and whoever is the cause of the yellow ... while the heating's good. When the wild geese fly ... When they return ... Once, however, he follows them into a peck of trouble ... mixed up with the Bad Man and shoots him. The Bad Man's brother musters vendetta and start in pursuit.

Love for his foster father and his ... induce Dan to give up his ... and settle down, but not ... has administered plenty of ... to the Bad Man. His experiences entail much shooting, ... riding, cliff climbing, etc. till the climax is dizzying.

Mr Mix in the picture shows his usual enthusiasm and good nature. The girl in the case a Miss Hopkins whom I have never seen before, has very little charm or personality. Most of the men in the cast are old favorites and have played with Mr Mix time and again.

Scenery and photograph pleases the eye and the star's own horse and dog furnish too of the reasons why you should see the picture.

At the Sigma until Thursday.

Broadway Greets Return of "Hopeless Cripple"

LILLIAN LORRAINE

(By JAMES W. DEAN)

NEW YORK — (Special) — A girl comes swinging lightly across the stage of the Selwyn Theater in "The Blue Kitten," Her part is to put bubbles into the lines of the musical farce.

Effervescent, she chatters on in bits of foolishness that make the T. B. M. forget just how tired he is. Her back is graced by not a single strand of silk and if you are one of those who see beauty in backs, you'd say this back is worthy of its exposure.

The girl is Lillian Lorraine. Her 'come-back' is the topic of discussion along Broadway this week. This is no ordinary "come-back," for Lillian returns from Death.

She fell down a flight of stairs January 31, 191, and fractured three vertebrae. She lay flat on her back for eight months. Doctors told her she would be a hopeless cripple.

She was the toast of many a gay gathering in the days before the accident. Then she was a star at the Ziegfeld Midnight Roof and in the Follies.

And now she plays on the stage the part that once was hers in life, but her frivolity is as thin as her make-up. I talked to her off stage.

"I am thankful to God for saving me from that death in life," she said. "My leisure time and money hereafter shall go to charity, to those helpless ones who were not so fortunate as I."

"The Blue Kitten" is a satire on the tipping habit. By night Cawthorn is a porter in a cafe. By day he is a gentleman of leisure at a chateau at Fontainebleau. His wife and daughter think his wealth is derived from his position as a night editor on a Paris newspaper.

WAR AGAINST VET BUREAU OPENS

Fight is Launched by Disabled Soldiers

ATTACK FARMING OUT PLAN

Vocational Training Scheme at Camps Also Hit

By HARRY HUNT

WASHINGTON — (Special) — America's disabled war veterans are getting back into the trenches to fight for fair, square treatment by the government.

That to date these men have received only hit-or-miss justice no one who has studied cases under the Veteran's Bureau will deny.

Whether responsibility lies with the men in charge of the system, or with failure by Congress to lay down a workable program and provide the means to carry it out, the fact remains clear that thousands of men and their families are suffering from the grossest neglect.

This applies to administering hospitalization, rehabilitation training and disability compensation.

The veterans' new drive for justice was precipitated by:

ONE. The decision of the bureau to provide vocational training for most rehabilitation cases at government schools to be developed in abandoned army camps.

TWO. The farming out of increasing numbers of veterans suffering from mental disorders to state or private asylums or sanitariums housing the criminal and pauper insane, where they are detained but receive no remedial treatment.

THREE. The inadequacy of government facilities to provide proper hospitals and care for tubercular cases arising from war service.

FOUR. Action by the bureau in changing men's ratings as to degree of disability and amount of disability compensation without physical re-examination of the men themselves.

The attack of the veterans will be directed by Robert S Marx, judge of the superior court of Cincinnati, as national commander of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War.

The first-line defense of the government's forces will be under orders of Colonel Charles R. Forbes, director of the U. S. Veterans Bureau.

The first casualty of the conflict is Major Arthur Dean, assistant director of the bureau, who lined up with the disabled veterans' ranks in opposing the organization of rehabilitation schools at old army camps, like the one now under way at Camp Sherman, O.

Altho the bureau announced Dean had resigned, his friends openly said he had been dismissed because of his "refusal to subscribe to the scheme of vocational rehabilitation which Director Forbes had inaugurated at Camp Sherman."

Dean's place in the bureau organization was immediately filled with Colonel Robert I. Rees, who was detailed to the service from the War Department. Rees was on Pershing's staff overseas.

RUSSIA WILL FILE CLAIMS ON U. S.

Reparations for War Damages to be Demanded

MOSCOW — (Associated Press) —Bolshevik delegates to the Genoa conference will present reparation claims there against "various powers and the United States." If these claims are made in terms of bolshevik rubles new names for large amounts may be necessary for the familiar terms of the decimal system will not cover the staggering sums claimed by this country which issues single bills for one hundred million rubles and discusses deficits of trillions of rubles as mere bagatelles. Leonoid Cassain, Maxim Litvinoff, M. Rakowsky and sores of other Communist leaders will probably go to Genoa to juggle figures.

Foreign debts owed by Russia and the claims of other governments against the soviet rule will be compared at the conference. Alabama claims, upon which the United States was successful after the Civil War, form the chief precedent upon which the bolshevik government will present its claims. Reams of documents will be presented to show the responsibility of the great powers for the damage suffered by Russia as a result of the Czecho-Slovak advance in Siberia, Admiral Colchak's advance and General Baron Wrangle's Crimean expedition, General Yudenitch's fiasco in the Baltic states; Petlura's activities in Ukraine and hundreds of smaller expeditions not reported to the western world.

As western imagination cannot comprehend the figures represented by bolshevik money, it seems probably Moscow will make her claims in gold rubles.

THINGS MIXED IN TRADE WORLD

Neither Better Nor Worse Than Was to be Expected

GOOD OFFSET BY THE BAD

Developments in Business Discussed by Forbes

(BY B. C. FORBES)

NEW YORK — (Special) — Things are getting neither better nor worse than was to be expected.

* * *

Improvement here is offset by recession there.

* * *

Better prices for certain commodities are reported simultaneously with declines for others.

Bullish activity in stocks has been concurrent with a sharp rise in call money rates.

Satisfaction over the Irish settlement has been counter-balanced by uneasiness over events in France.

Occasional good dividend news has been dampened by the appearance of several important annual reports showing serious losses.

An increase for the week in railway car loadings attracts less notice than the movement to force early and drastic rate reductions.

Altho emphasis is laid on a reduction in commercial failures as compared with the previous week, the fact is not overlooked in thinking circles that bankruptcies are still running at the rate of more than 100 every business day.

* * *

Favorable labor developments at certain points excite less notice than the increased newspaper attention now being devoted to the darkening prospects of a nation-wide strike by both hard and softcoal miners.

One day Secretary Hoover predicts an advance in sugar prices, but the next he predicts a coal strike.

Steel reports are very mixed, but the petroleum industry reports output at a new high record.

The copper people, tho hopeful are still marking time.

Wool is creeping upwards, but grain and cotton prices are still unsatisfactory to growers.

Ford announces record production and sales for last year, but most other companies are passing thru a very trying period, with prices still tending downwards.

The principal foreign exchanges have stood up reasonably well and against the unsettling events in Europe, but exports of American merchandise apparently continue to dwindle.

And so it goes, favorable developments being counter-balanced by unfavorable developments, the net effect produced being neither pronouncedly optimistic nor pronouncedly pessimistic.

As to the wisest course of action, there need be little doubt. Vigilant overhauling of overhead must now be supplanted by the most aggressive drumming up of business.

Moreover, in most lines the time unquestionably has come for acting with more courage than was advisable not so long ago, for we are approaching the time when demand is almost certain to expand, and it may prove costly to delay over-long preparing for increased business, especially as stocks of goods on hand in many lines are now quite light. Having been caught with heavy inventories on hand when the boom burst is no proper reason for incurring the risk of being caught without goods on hand when the call for goods comes. Certainly there is infinitely less risk in ordering goods rather freely today, now that prices in most directions are about at bottom, than there was in carrying enormous stocks when prices were skyrocketing.

The urge to find employment for unprecedented amounts of idle money is already being reflected by the activity in the stock markets, and it can be accepted as certain that industry and general business will shortly begin to experience a stimulating influence from the same cause.

Let this thought, however, be taken to heart. Altho we are entering a period of easy money, we are little likely to enter a period of easy profits.

The other day I visited a very large plant which is doing more business than ever before. Others in the same city were doing either a normal or a less-than-normal business. Investigation of the busy plant revealed that there has been extremely able management, prompt readjustment to the changed conditions when the boom burst, and the most strenuous campaign for orders thru increased advertising, a vigorously toned-up selling force and other aggressive measures.

The current year promises to bring possibilities for satisfactory business, but to turn these possibilities into cash in the bank will call for a maximum of intelligent, energetic effort.

CENTRAL OHIO ROUTE FOR WATERWAY FAVORED

COLUMBUS—An all-water route from Sandusky to Portsmouth thru the heart of Ohio, using the Sandusky and Scioto rivers was advocated by the Columbus Chamber of Commerce before the United States board of engineers for rivers and harbors here today.

The route would involve an expenditure of approximately $114,000,000 according to estimates put forth by the chamber of commerce and would be a considerable saving over other proposed routes.

General Harry Taylor said that a survey may be eventually undertaken, but the lack of funds prevented the assurance of it at the present time.

NEW YORK —Speculative issues rallied moderately at the opening of today's stock market. Steels and equipments manifested some relaxation from last Saturday's selling pressure. Gulf States, Replogle, Midvale and U. S. Steel rose large fractions. Sugars, coppers and rails also improved, but oils and motors were lower. Foreign exchanges were irregular, altho London's markets were firm on the successful underwriting of new eastern European loans.

Reactions of 1 to 2 points in domestic and foreign oils gave the market a heavy tone today during the first hour. This was further emphasized by selling of minor steels and equipments, also motors and their specialties and popular tobaccos and chemicals. The market rallied irregularly before noon under lead of Gulf States Steel, which advanced 7 1-2 points on renewed buying of sugars, texxtiles, American Can, American Ice and American Traction. Of the latter Manhattan Elevated and Interborough Consolidated preferred was strongest, rising 2 1-2 and 3 points respectively. Call money opened at 5 per cent.

Standard stocks again yielded to speculative issues today. The independent steels resumed last week's erratic movements, recording wide fluctuations. Sales approximated 650,000 shares.

The closing was irregular. Liberty bonds eased and railroad bonds were featureless.

FORMER LIMA PASTOR IN ADDRESS ON CIVILIZATION CURE, BEFORE ROTARIANS

Rev. Franklin Stiles, Middletown, former pastor of the First Baptist church in Lima, inspired the Rotary club with an address, "The Cure for Civilization," at the noonday luncheon Monday. One hundred and twenty-six members attended.

Rev. Kirk O'Farrell gave a report on Rotary educational work, advocating that the club assist in providing more and better work for boys.

Plans were laid to attend the district meeting at Dayton early in March. President George Bayly appointed Ralph Austin, Pete Huisken, Fred Dorries, Clem Thompson and Wilbur Smith as a committee on arrangements. There is additional incentive to attend because the District Governor, Robert Patterson, resides there.

Mrs. James Grubb and Mrs. Fred Calvert gave a piano duet. Two pianos were employed. For their kindness in providing entertainment for the club each will be presented with a pair of kid gloves, President Bayly announced.

BODY OF FORMER LIMA MAN BROUGHT FROM WEST

The body of Benjamin Gearing, formerly of Lima, killed at Marysville, Cal., last week, arrived in Lima Sunday and was conveyed to the home of his mother, Mrs. Solomon Gearing, at Buckland. Gearing was employed by a mining company in Marysville.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 2 p. m. at the Methodist church, Buckland.

FARM IN IRELAND AWAITS BALLESTY, BELIEVED HERE

A small farm in Dungay, Ballymore-co, Westmeath, Ireland, awaits Patrick Ballesty, who is thought to be in Lima. Local police have been asked by John Macken, Dublin solicitor, to locate Ballesty, who came to America in 1910. A relative bequeathed him the farm.

CHICAGO —Cold weather tended to send wheat prices upward today because of lack of snow protection in the southwest. Commission houses were chief buyers. Some of them took the position that all depressing factors in the market had been discounted. Opening quotations, which varied from unchanged figures to 3-8c higher with May 1.16 to 1. 16 1-4 and July 1.03 to 1.03 1-4, were followed by moderate gains all around.

Liberal receipts made the corn market relatively easy. After opening at 1-4c off to 1-8c advance, May 53 1-2 to 53 5-8, the market kept close to the initial range.

Oats paralleled the action of wheat, starting unchanged to 1¼c higher, May 39 1-4 to 39 3-8 and then scored a slight general advance.

Higher quotations on hogs gave provisions a decided lift in value.

The wheat close was unsettled, 1-8 to 1c net lower with May 115 5-8 to 115 3-4 and July 102 to 102 1-8.

The corn close was weak at a shade to 1-8 at 1-4c net decline, May 53 1-2.

COLD SNAP MAY BOOST PRICE OF EGGS, SOME DEALERS SAY MONDAY

Produce markets continue quiet.

No price changes of any consequence have been announced lately and few new articles are being put on sale.

Dealers predict that eggs will decrease in price this week, while others say that the present cold snap will cause the price to soar as the hens stop laying.

Eggs are now 40 cents a dozen at most places, but some stores have been selling them as low as 34 cents.

RAILROAD RATE SUIT DISMISSED BY COURT

WASHINGTON — The supreme court today dismissed the North Dakota railroad rate suit, on the ground that the case should first go to the North Dakota district court.

The suit was brought by North Dakota state officials to knock out increased railroad rates fixed by the interstate commerce commission.

The supreme court's action today was not based on the merits of the case.

AT 14 SHE WROTE OF ART—AT 20 SHE'S EXPRESSING IT

JOSEPHINE FETTER ROYLE

(BY ALICE ROHE)

NEW YORK — "But what is art but a speaking soul?"

Rather a beautiful and philosophic thought to be expressed by a fourteen-year-old girl—

I sat watching Josephine Fetter Royle, the remarkable young daughter of Edwin Milton Royle and Selena Fetter Boyle, put on her makeup for the Indian wife in her father's play, "The Squaw Man."

And I couldn't help but wish that Mr. W. L. George, who is going about the country lecturing on the Intelligence of Women, might, for his own sake, hear this youthful feminine intelligence express itself.

LIKES TO WRITE POETRY

Little Miss Royle, who is barely twenty, and whose recent portrayal of Elaine in her father's "Launcelot and Elaine" was pronounced an inspired performance, confessed somewhat shyly to a predelletion for writing poetry. Her first poem, from which the above line is quoted, appeared in Ainslee's Magazine, when she was fourteen.

"It's difficult to say just how much one owes to heredity," she said "but of course my father and mother have inspired me with an appreciation of the stage and of literature. My sister Selena and I havt always felt that the stage was our natural profession."

"You are quite the most unactressy, matter-of-fact young actress I have ever seen," I commented.

"Oh, but I feel the fascination of the stage just the same," she replied.

"Mother has always explained the uncomfortable as well as the comfortable side of stage life to us. After all, the stage is just the same as writing or painting or singing—it is a mode of expressing oneself.

STAGE A MEDIUM

"I see the stage in its true perspective. My parents have protected me from silly romanticism about it. I see it as a medium of expressing art.

"I think it is a good thing for every girl to have a profession," she continued, placing a bead band, which she had made herself, as a Camp Fire Girl, on her Indian braids—"so she won't have to marry the first man who asks her!"

Josephine Royle is an unusual combination of lack of sophistication and of maturity of mind.

STEEL MEN SEEK FREIGHT CUT

High Rate Declared Chief Obstacle to Prosperity

WASHINGTON — (Associated Press) — Representatives of the steel industry, appearing today before the Interstate Commerce Commission in connection with the investigation into transportation rate levels, renewed their demand that the forty per cent increase in freight rates ordered in 1920, be removed. Most of the witnesses expressed the opinion that the present high freight levels constituted the chief obstacle to a return to business prosperity.

"It is the mal-adjustment of prices and service charges which continues to force the existing depression," J. L. Rooney, of Middletown, Ohio, declared, speaking for the American Rolling Mills Company. "Prior to 1915 the prices of commodities and of transportation had been adjusted to a normal on what the exchange of commodities could take place. Today we find the relationship distorted and most seriously distorted in the level of railroad rates. The price of everything else has been brought down below the war peaks to a greater or less degree, but the railroad charges are held at the top. Consequently normal exchange of commodities or normal resumption of business, cannot take place."

Commissioner Lewis asked if the steel industry would prefer reductions in rates if the consequences were impairment of transportation service.

SUSTO FOR DELICATE CHILDREN

Tested and Approved at One of Our Greatest American Medical Colleges

For the first time in history we are able to offer to our people a remedy tested and approved by a Professor of Physiology Chemistry at one of our greatest American Medical Colleges After testing SUSTO in many cases and for many months in his final report he says:

"In every instance where undernourished infants and children were given SUSTO important body-weight increases were registered A notable case is that of a boy of eleven who had been under weight for three or four years in spite of the best medical and dietetic tratment SUSTO produced a gain of six pounds

Similar tests were made upon children, adults and aged people suffering from malnutrition, nervousness, anemic conditions and others recuperating from illness In every case SUSTO demonstrated its power to stimulate the appetite and increase bodily weight and strength Therefore, we feel confident that those who need strength, lack energy are nervous, anemic, run down, under weight, or feeble old people, can find nothing better than SUSTO

SUSTO simply adds to the daily diet in concentrated form the growth promoting, strength and life-giving elements of yeast, rice, eggs, milk, beef protein and iron that they are not getting in their daily food and which are necessary to sustain strength and life—Thompson's 3 Drug Stores.

PARLEY DOOMED, SIMONDS SAYS

Declares Washington Conference Will be Failure

SEES DEATH FOR TREATIES

Compromises Reached at Expense of America

(BY FRANK H. SIMONDS)

WASHINGTON The Washington Conference is rapidly going the way of the Paris Conference and for precisely the same reasons This is the inevitable conclusion one must draw from the events of the last few days Three years ago in April, I told my readers in a Paris despatch that the League of Nations was dead so far as America was concerned and that there would be no peace settlement reached

The reason for that conclusion holds good today Then it was becoming quite patent that the American people would never accept the commitments compromises, concessions made in their name at Paris but made without their knowledge Today the situation is not different Within the past week we have consented to amendments of proposed treaties which would bind us not to fortify our own territory while no similarly restrictive engagements would be undertaken by our neighbors At this moment we are proposing a Chinese arrangement which would be tantamount to complete abandonment of China and are seeking to give this desertion the color of a victory for the American principle of the open door

OPPOSITION GROWS

Meantime it is becoming daily clearer that the revolt against the commitments made in the present Conference by the American delegates is extending in the Senate and almost inevitably dooms all the treaties which are now planned A month ago it was possible to count no more than a half dozen votes against the treaties as then outlined Today the opposition counts more than 30 and probably lacks only five of sufficient total to defeat the conference agreements

To pass from the general to the specific what is the present situation?

First of all there is but one definite achievement and that is the Four Power Treaty covering the region of the Pacific But it is already known that this treaty must be amended to exclude the mainland of Japan if it is to have the smallest chance of ratification Moreover it is clear that ratification is always contingent upon a proper Chinese settlement

NAVAL LIMITATION

Secondly —The Five Power Naval Ratio Treaty once definitely agreed to has also been recalled for amendment This amendment will exclude from the non-fortifying provisions all of the chief islands of Britain and Japan while retaining the American This means that in addition to making a fair proposal for mutual limitation of armaments in capital ships we have been forced to purchase Japanese and British assent by depriving ourselves of the right to fortify our own territory, while neither Japan nor Britain has made any similar sacrifice Therefore the 5-5-3 ratio does not actually represent a fact, for without naval bases we are infinitely inferior both to Britain and Japan in the Far East

Thirdly — As a consequence of the Anglo French row over the submarine there will be no limitation of armament outside of capital ships This means that there may still be intensive competition in those naval arms universally recognized as the weapons of the future, namely airplanes and submarines Actual limitation is restricted to the obsolescent capital ship.

Fourthly — There has been no agreement upon any real adjustment in the Far East and with respect of China The Board of Reference described as Mr Hughes's latest bombshell is in reality no more than a "dud" and it is known in advance that China will not accept or sign anything like what is now proposed as a Far Eastern solution All Chinese experts agree that the latest proposal for a board of reference does not hold out slightest hope of any real usefulness and is no more than a sort of smokescreen covering failure Not only China, but Holland, as well, will refuse to sign the so-called Nine Power Treaty which was to meet the Far Eastern situation
